Cliff Vice visits 6th grade class

by Margaret Duncan

The Sixth Grade students of Nicholas County Elementary who are studying Agri-business as part of Career Education, had as their guest, Oct. 24, Cliff Vice of the Farm Bureau.

Mr. Vice is a farmer and an insurance man. He talked to us about farming today and yesterday. He also told us that Farm Bureau was started in 1943, and that it contributes to farming. He said that they haven't just started a new club in Farm Bureau in chemicals. He said that Southern States was good competition for Farm Bureau.

Farm Bureau helps with farm plant and animal diseases. Farm Bureau also has a Rural Electric program. Mrs. Marjorie Wilson, our teacher, said that when she was a little girl where she lived only two houses had electricity.

Mr. Vice said he had been selling insurance for 11 years. He said he is with three insurance companies. He sells life, accident, and prevention insurance.

Then we asked questions. Someone asked if he sells cattle insurance. He said he did. Someone asked what kind of training he had. He said he had three months of insurance school. He said he was taking classes in Lexington at night. He said he could never stop learning.

Someone asked what his fringe benefits were. He said that they got paid trips, contests, and insurance. He said that rates are different. The highest rates are from ages 16 to 25 on unmarried boys. I asked, with the training he had if he could work at another job. He said yes, he could have worked in a bank. He said in Carlisle we average about 10 to 12 car accidents a week.

This week, Nov. 11-16, is National Career Guidance Week.

Carlisle West Homemakers meet

The Carlisle West Homemakers met at 1:30 p.m. Nov. 8, with Mrs. Charles Wilson as hostess. Mrs. Grimes Caywood presided.

The devotional was given by Mrs. Russell Shrout. Twelve members answered roll call with "What I Am Thankful For." Mrs. Frank Henry gave the treasurer's report. Mrs. Wilson gave the Family Life Newsletter on "Self-respect." Mrs. Ben Pumphrey Sr. reported on "Ways to Conserve Energy." Mrs. S.M. DeMyer counted the number of books read this past month.

Miss Mary Lois Campbell gave the lesson on "Cheese", assisted by Mrs. Wilson, after which the members tasted various kinds of cheese with their refreshments.

South Central Bell

Free brochure available

by Willmer Halcomb

"Heal your problems with soil." That's the advice both city and country people get today from the Soil Conservation Service, an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Glen E. Murray, who heads the Soil Conservation Service in Kentucky, has announced free color brochures are now available to virtually all land users. Obtainable through any one of Kentucky's 121 conservation district offices, nine new color brochures are designed for homebuyers, farmers, engineers, builders, planners, and even for waste disposal.

The leaflets reveal the economic secrets of modern soil surveys. Whether you're in the market for a home or a playground, the helpful money-saving tips are available from your local Soil Conservation Office, P.O. Box 303, or stop by the office in the basement of the Post Office Building.
