EPA registers 600 pesticides

By Marva Gay
Bugging the pesticide manufacturers about a new registration law is paying off.

One month after the division of special programs in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection began registering pesticides, over 600 varieties have been approved. According to state pesticide chief, Fred Waters, the number may reach 5,000 by the January deadline. Fred Waters said only 600 different chemicals will be registered. The rest will be identical chemicals sold under the different brand names.

A new state law places pesticide regulation under the state environmental protection agency. The law, beginning Oct. 1, all manufacturers of pesticides must register the chemicals they sell in Kentucky with the agency. Many pesticides previously were registered with the University of Kentucky regulatory service.

A few months ago, the department began sending messages to pesticide manufacturers telling them of the new requirements. "We wanted to make sure the manufacturers knew what they were expected to do," said Waters. "If the response was fast in an indication, we succeeded in reaching the right people with the right information."

Each pesticide must be registered for use on specified crops and at stated stages of their growth. The restrictions and approved uses must be spelled out on the pesticide's label.

Before the state registers a pesticide for a particular use, it must be approved and registered for that use by the Federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), which investigates each chemical. However, the state may issue an emergency registration for a specific use of a pesticide which has not been registered for that use with the EPA.

"We would use the emergency provision only in very unusual circumstances," said Waters. "We might use it if a crop were invaded by an insect which had never appeared in Kentucky before and would probably never appear again. By using the emergency provision, we can control the situation before it gets out of hand."

Waters added that emergency registration should help prevent dangerous situations. "In the past, when an unusual situation arose, people started mixing chemicals together without much investigation about their combined effects," said Waters. "Before we issue an emergency registration, there is an investigation to make sure the new pesticide isn't dangerous."

Pesticides must be re-registered each year. If there are many complaints about a chemical during the year, it will be investigated by the federal agency. If federal registration is denied, the state will also reject that pesticide.

Anyone who uses pesticides must stick to what the label says. The Federal Environmental Protection Control Act of 1972 made improper use of pesticides illegal. Some pesticides may not be used at all unless that applicator has a

Homemakers meet Nov. 7

The Moorefield Homemakers met Nov. 7, at the home of Mrs. J.S. Wilson. Mrs. Joe Smart and Mrs. Pam Samples were co-hostesses for the 17 member meeting.

Mrs. Hanson Ellington, club president called the meeting to order. Members answered roll call with "Something I'm Thankful For". Two new members are Mrs. Judy Hogue and Mrs. Phyllis Hamey. Mrs. Pauline Clark gave the devotional.

Issues and Concerns chairman, Mrs. W.J. Clark, distributed leaflets and a quilt. Plans for the annual Christmas project, "Bring us the children" were discussed.

The regular meeting date was changed to Dec. 10 because of the Christmas Festival.

Mrs. Joe Smart and Mrs. W.J. Clark represented the club in Winchester, attending the Nov. 13 "Program Planning" session.

An interesting lesson was given by Mrs. Mike Jones, who had prepared a cheese ball and cheese log along with other samples of cheese which was served with refreshments furnished by the host and co-hostesses.

The next meeting, the Christmas party, will be at the home of Mrs. Hanson Ellington, with Mrs. Harold Mitchell co-hostesses.

license for restricted chemicals. Waters plans to provide pesticide users with a training and education program to make sure they know the details of that law.

5th graders watch 'Mulligan Stew'

"Learning about nutrition in a fun way"—that's how some Nicholas county youngsters describe "Mulligan Stew". The 4-1/2 television series now being seen by fifth graders at the Nicholas County Elementary School.

Chris Wendels, Judy Ritchie, Judy Prewitt and Evelyn Brierley, 5th grade teachers, are coordinating the nutrition series.

Emphasizing that food is fun and that it includes ideas for nutrition-related games, puzzles, experiments, displays, and many other classroom activities. Educational television Fridays at 12 noon (EST), except for Thanksgiving week when no program is scheduled.

Statwide, some 6,000 fifth graders are watching the "Mulligan Stew" series, which started Nov. 1. The program emphasizes such topics as eating right, the four basic food groups, breakfast, snacks, calories, and food fats.

The series gets its name from John Prewitt and Evelyn Brierley, 5th grade teachers, are coordinating the 4-1/2 television series, "Mulligan Stew," being shown to fifth grade students at the Nicholas County Elementary School.

Impossible" type assignment related to nutrition. Lots of music and color, fast action cartoon figures and "come-alive" puppets in a "Seaside Street" atmosphere liven up the 30-minute program. In addition, teachers have been supplied with supplementary materials to help with follow-up activities related to "Mulligan Stew".

These include ideas for nutrition-related games, puzzles, experiments, displays, and many other classroom activities. There are even recipes that can be prepared in class. Fifth graders here will be trying many of these during the next few weeks, and they will also have the opportunity to take part in other 4-1/2 activities connected with foods and nutrition.

Last spring, 49,000 Kentucky students (mostly fifth graders) watched these 4-1/2 hour programs, and 119 of them were in Nicholas county. Both students and teachers liked the series so well that it was decided to show it to this year's fifth graders.

In a state survey of 200 classrooms most successful educational series 4:1 has ever appeared for it.

The state-wide showing of "Mulligan Stew" is a cooperative effort involving Kentucky, local and state departments of Education, and the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.
