Ison youth foils robbery; native claims Mich. bounty

Robert Kingsolver, a senior at Centre College in Danville, has been named by Centre as a candidate for the Danforth Fellowship. The Danforth Fellowship provides guidance and merit scholarships to college graduates who plan to attend graduate school and teach on the college level. Candidates are selected by faculty liaison officers who take into account scholarship, personal character and evidence of social responsibility. Mr. Kingsolver was also recently named to the dean's list at Centre. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. W.R. Kingsolver.

P.T.A. program is set for Dec. 2

The Nicholas County Elementary P.T.A. will meet Monday, Dec. 2 at 7:30 p.m. at the school.

The speaker for the evening will be Mrs. Frank Mercke, who will speak on Specific Perceptual-Motor Disabilities (SPMD). At present Mrs. Mercke is the first president of the Kentucky Society of SPMD. She has served as professional consultant for the Kentucky Conference of Children and Youth, and as director of the Kentucky Association Reading Research Program. She is now serving as co-director of the Kentucky Association of Multiple Handicapped Children, and chairman of the Screening and Tutorial Committee of the Kentucky Association of SPMD.

Mrs. Mercke has been nominated for the Timmy Peace Medal.

The program will be presented in cooperation with the Carlisle Junior Woman's Club, Mrs. Paul Martin, chairman.

There will also be an art display in the library and art room of work students have done since the first of school.

Jack Conley, P.T.A. president, urges parents and friends to attend this informative meeting.

DARK PICTURE

Mike Ison, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Turman (Bill) Ison, owners of Ison Farm on Locust Street, foiled a robbery attempt Nov. 1 at an A&P store in Alamogordo Springs, Fla., where he works. While the robbery was in progress, Mike casually walked out of the store and reported to police.

The Sentinel Star, Orlando, Fla., carried the following report regarding Mike, a senior at Seminole High School in Sanford, and who works from 1 to 10 p.m. He said he had forgotten to wear his A&P name tag. "I left it on my dresser," he reported, and thought the gunman might not know he was an employee.

He said he didn't know accomplices were at each door, but I figured there might be a gunman in a get-a-way car outside, and I thought fore sure the gunman in the store was watching me and might try to stop me." But he said that since he didn't have his store tag on he would give it a try. "I grabbed a grocery cart and just walked outside and walked to the bank next door. I was so flabbergated I could hardly talk. I ran in the bank and yelled, 'There's been a robbery at the A&P!'"

One gunman was killed and a police officer was critically wounded in the attempted holdup.

Mike, who is staying in Florida to finish his senior year in high school in December, will then join his parents here. He received a $50 savings bond for his short action.

W.H. Scott, Resconman, Mich., earned a net profit of $15 early Wednesday morning, Nov. 5, from a coyote bounty.

Scott, of Scott's Wood Products, was driving to work about 5 a.m. on M-78 when an animal ran across the path of his pickup.

What Scott thought was a fawn, however, turned out to be a coyote. Before he could collect the $20 bounty for female coyotes, though, he had to spend $5 and buy a small game license as required by law.

"I don't even hunt," he remarked later.

Scott was headed northbound on M-78 when he hit the animal near Barnab Lake. He backed the truck up and saw wobbling toward him the coyote. He hit it with a jack and then threw it in the back, and just went by open the gate so that he could drive in. As he was getting into the truck, he saw the animal growl and saw it standing up again. Scott then hit it with a two by four.

Two Department of Natural Resources (DNR) officials said about $75000 a year is paid in coyote bounties for males and females.

Nels Johnson, regional wildlife biologist, said that coyote can be taken at all times; there is no season.

Mr. Scott is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Worth W. Scott of Route 2, Carlisle.

This Hewitt, Mills, Toward, 1 inch, has been procured from the U.S. Army for permanent display in the courthouse yard. Equal donations of $15 each were made by the V.F.W. Post No. 866, the American Legion Post No. 17, the City of Carlisle, and the County of Nicholas towards expense incurred in the acquisition of the cannon. SCTO James T. Caswell, 885 Harold W. Capps, and Army Depot, Chambersburg, Pa., to pick up the Hewitt.

Sens. Huddleston, Ward protest Blue Grass Army Depot reduction

WASHINGTON—Senator Walter Dee Huddleston joined last week with other members of the Kentucky congressional delegation in protesting the Department of the Army's decision to cut back on funding and employment at Lexington's Blue Grass Army Depot. The Kentucky senator argued that the total transfer of 30 military and 2,500 civilian jobs would impose a severe economic hardship on Lexington and the surrounding affected counties. According to recent statistics, there are 58 persons presently employed at the Depot from Nicholas County.

Huddleston expressed his disappointment at the decision by saying, "Lexington Blue Grass Army Depot has been rated the most efficient depot in the Army Materiel Command and seems this high rating should cause the Department to re-evaluate its decision."

"Not only will this cutback harm our national defense system, but it will especially impose a hardship on the families of the men affected by transfer. Unemployment rates would double or triple in some counties when we are already in the depths of a recession," Huddleston added.

Senator Huddleston pledged to continue his efforts to bring about a reconsideration of the recent decision.

Bluejackets drop opener

by Jimmy Smith

The Nicholas County Bluejackets opened their 1974-75 basketball season Friday night with a defeat at the hands of a much larger Rowan County team, 69-23. Despite being greatly outdressed, the Jackets managed to drive to the basket which resulted in some excessive fouling by key Rowan County players. This strategy almost paid off in the end, but the game wound up as what Coach Bill Anderson termed as "one to build on."

The game started out with a basket swiping exhibition, the exact type play that marked last season's game between the two teams which ended 10-10. (Continued on page 5)
