INSPECTOR LLOYD CASSIDY of the state Bureau of Vehicle Regulation's Division of Highway Enforcement checks the scale reading on a coal truck prior to issuing an overweight citation. Each highway enforcement inspector carries two portable scales in the trunk of his vehicle and weighs and inspects trucks wherever he encounters them. The operator is issued a citation if his truck exceeds the weight limit of the road he is travelling on, or if his load is improperly distributed so as to put too much stress on the road at a specific point. During the latest reporting period—Aug. 24 - Sept. 20, 1974—highway enforcement inspectors issued 183 citations to operators of overweight coal trucks, bringing the 1974 total to 1,712. During the same period, 220 citations were issued to carriers of other types of overweight freight which were primarily detected at the bureau's weigh stations located on the interstates and other major Kentucky trucking routes. The total number of citations issued in 1974 to overweight freight carriers (other than coal) now stands at 2,609.

The Safety Patrol members at the School for the Deaf get no reward for their faithfulness to duty except their appointment and on Awards Day each year a certificate. Their recognition comes from their faithful execution of their duties between 7:45 and 8:00 when Second Street, Danville, is heavily traveled, they begin their duty. At the change in periods between classes when classes must cross the street going from one building to another you will see them again. Then at noon, when school closes at 3:00 and 3:15 p.m. the Patrollers continue their job. The Kentucky School for the Deaf is believed to be the only school of its kind that has a Safety Patrol. Pictured from row right, Dennis Kemp of Jeffersontown, Jimmy Tincher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ritchie of Route 1, Carlisle, Margaret Jones, Springfield, Leslie Green, Lexington; back row, Don Allen of Owensboro, Sandra Thomas, Corbin, Tammy Hicks, Paducah, Deborah Sheffield, Louisville, Donna Goins, Owensboro and Tammy Sexton, Myra. Missing from picture is Ronnie Morrow, Danville.

Mobile Unit visits Vocational Center

Through the efforts of the Harrison Vocational Center and the Do All Manufacturing Company of Des Plaines, Ill., the Mobile Demonstration Unit will bring productivity right into this area.

The Unit will be located in the parking lot of the Harrison County Area Vocational Center, located just across the street from Harrison County High School in Cynthiana, on Monday, Oct. 14, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Within this mobile unit are many of the most modern and up-to-date machines such as automatic power saws; contour band machine; precision heavy-duty, geared-head engine lathe; heavy duty vertical milling machines; gage blocks; monolight optical flats, comparators, direct-reading gages, granite products and band gages, variable-speed drill press machines.

Visit this mobile unit, see the demonstrations performed.

While there visit the Vocational training programs and see what efforts are being made to stay abreast with modern times.
