

Perkins says tobacco quotas revolves around one question

Rep. Carl D. Perkins of Kentucky is opposed to any increased federal taxes on gasoline, and said any effort to do everything a member of the U.S. Congress can do to improve the economy.

Perkins pointed out that the possibility of an additional 10 cents gallon on gasoline was first raised when the mid-range tax was raised to the oil embargo.

The Administration started talking about it then, as a way to try to get people to drive less and in the wrong way, said Rep. Perkins said.

Many working people in any area just cannot get to work any way except by car, and many other families cannot get to the doctor or to the store, except by car, he said.

These people should not be deprived by having to pay so much for gasoline that they cannot afford to get where they have to go, he said.

The Seventh District Congressman said that of course we must conserve oil until we get coal liquefaction and coal gasification on a commercial scale.

Senator Marvin Cook has introduced an eight-point program for fighting inflation and lowering the cost of living.

Increasing the personal tax exemption from $250 to $1000 per year. Providing that if the personal tax exemption should be automatically increased or decreased by a percentage equal to changes in the cost of living index.

A minimum tax on those having annual incomes in excess of $50,000. Limiting the welfare and social security systems to allow people receiving these benefits to earn incomes, at part time or seasonal employment without being disqualified from receiving benefits.

Removal of statutory limits on the amount of money that can be deposited under $100,000 in an effort to get more money into lending institutions.

Of President Gerald R. Ford's recent executive order suspending the provisions of the Congress, Cook said: "I believe the steps of the President's program which focus on reducing the inflationary impact of the government's rules and regulations deserve favorable consideration."

"I am in support of a more strict enforcement of the anti-trust laws, and an increase in the penalties for violations of those laws."

"I fully support the President's plan to stimulate production of the economy."

"I must however strongly oppose the imposition of a 5% surcharge on the personal income of those with family incomes over $15,000. It is not a time to impose an additional tax burden on many people who are already struggling, desperately, to survive."

The President's proposal also does nothing for those people who are in the lower income levels. Funds are conserved that until the federal government's program will attempt to reduce the importance in increasing inflation," according to Carl Sanders, Lancaster, chairman of the Ford-Linville.

Tobacco quotas revolves around one question

Arguments over whether to end barley tobacco quotas for next year revolve around one basic question: how can we get the right amount of tobacco, and said any effort to do everything a member of the U.S. Congress can do to improve the economy.

Ford asks for donations

In an appeal to the people of Kentucky to help support the media costs of his campaign, Governor William Taylor has asked that all people who have donated either to his campaign or to the Kentucky Democratic Party to contribute an additional $17.64.

The $17.64 figure was derived by dividing the federal limitation for campaign media spending by the number of contributors. The Governor has stated that it is essential that full use of advertising in the media be implemented in order to fully inform the voters of Kentucky to the issues and the candidates' records.
