Minimum Foundation recommendations under study

Baker represents county on state advisory council

Essence Baker represented Nicholas county on the Citizens Advisory Council on the minimum foundation program which met Oct. 9 in Frankfort. The group consists of professional educators and laymen who will recommend the educational legislation that the superintendents of public instruction will present to the next General Assembly.
Represented on the council are Kentucky Education Association (KEA), Kentucky Association of School Administrators (KASA), Kentucky Association of Parents and Teachers (PTA), Kentucky School Boards Association (KSBA), the state Department of Education, as well as many citizens who served on the Citizens Advisory Council for the 1974 session of the legislature.
In addition, 30 new members have been added to the council. Each county in Kentucky was asked to send a representative to the council—"a civic-minded person not directly connected with education," according to Arnold Goslin, deputy bureau head for the Bureau of Administration and Finance.
Included in the list council members in attendance at the Oct. 9 meeting were several mayors, housewives, doctors—people from all walks of life," Goslin said. "Four members of the legislature also came to the meeting."
State Superintendent of Public Instruction Dr. Lyman V. Ginger, in welcoming the group, outlined a number of areas he felt deserved consideration by the council: teachers' retirement benefits and salaries; special education programs; kindergarten; and "shared accountability" to outline costs of various programs. Ginger said, "We are talking about limited resources. Where do we get the resources to buy programs that the citizenry wants for their children? Where do we put the emphasis?"
During the day-long meeting, council subcommittees began to assign tentative priorities to legislative issues. Two areas given high priority by several subcommittees were "per-pupil expenditure" and "effort in keeping with ability."

Fred Williams, director of the KASA, told the group that Kentucky spends less per pupil than any of the seven surrounding states. He urged the council to aim toward bringing Kentucky's per-pupil spending for teachers' salaries and other purposes up to the level in the states bordering Kentucky.
Maurice Bement of the KSBA proposed that Kentucky should "match the national average effort in support of the state."

Church, Va.; Henry Thomas Caswell and Johnny David Caswell, both of Nicholas county; Russell Ewell Caswell, Paris; one sister, Mrs. Leslie Parrish, Cynthiana; four brothers, Hoy Jones, Paris; Russell and Clarence Jones, both of Georgetown; Eddie Jones, Vaneburg; four grandchildren.
Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. Monday, Oct. 14, 1974 at the Mathers-Shearer Chapel conducted by Rev. H. Dallas Sugg and Rev. William Cervero. Burial in the Carlele Cemetery.

This situation should be changed. Besides these proposals and the items listed by Dr. Ginger, other issues discussed by the council were:
—Equalizing the amount spent on education in different areas of the state;
—Changes in the governance of education in Kentucky;
—Formation of a school building authority to provide construction funds for districts with "a high incidence of need";
—Effort to inform the public about the goals of the council;
The council voted to begin establishing local citizens advisory groups and to increase membership on the council's steering committee to include 50 per cent laymen.
