Clocks remain the same

Nicholas county residents will not have to change their clocks when this area returns to Eastern Standard Time at 2 a.m. Oct. 27.

This is the same time zone the county was in prior to Jan. 6, 1974.

Gov. Wendell Ford successfully petitioned the U.S. Department of Transportation to have Kentucky's former time zones reinstated the last Sunday of this month.

The Governor stressed the action was necessary for two reasons:

1) An amendment by the Congress to the Emergency Daylight Saving Time Energy Conservation Act of 1973, signed by the President, calls for three time changes in Kentucky in the next six months. Ford said this action by the federal government would cause " undue hardship and confusion on the people."

2) Next April, Kentucky's time zones would have automatically been returned to their former status because of federal law.

"What this really amounts to is that I asked the Secretary of Transportation to do now, what would have automatically happened on April 27 under federal law. However, with the time change taking place in October, the people of Kentucky will not be unduly harassed," Ford said.

The Governor added that Kentucky counties bordering other states will be on the same time as the neighboring state.

Babe Ruth meeting

Ag. Dept. assures Rep. Perkins no burley action without considering farmers views

That first snow

Every fall during the past 20 years The Mercury has received an inserting order for advertising Wary's Fleo-Glass. The Wary's people must have an in with nature, the waxy vermin and weather prognosticators— seldom have their ads been published that feel weather didn't follow.

So that the mist that came down Saturday morning was really snow—the area's first snowfall.

One can't say we haven't been warned; there've been newspaper articles, radio broadcasts and signs proclaiming a hard, cold winter ahead.

The Department of Agriculture has assured Rep. Carl D. Perkins that it will take no action with respect to the 1973 burley tobacco crop quota, "without giving farmers the right to make their views known."

Rep. Perkins had written to Agricultural Secretary Earl Butts recently, after articles appeared saying that production controls might be removed from the 1973 crop.

Rep. Perkins protested this strongly, saying it would drive prices down below the profit margin for farmers, and he urged the Secretary of Agriculture to meet with burley growers before any such action is ever contemplated.

The response from the Agriculture Department said, in part: "In order to have the latest data possible with respect to supply and demand, it is contemplated that no action will be taken with respect to the 1973 burley crop quota until the latter part of January, 1975. Prior to taking any action with respect to the 1973 crop quota, public notice will be given and farmers and other interested persons will be afforded an opportunity to submit views and comments. We assure you that careful consideration will be given to the views and comments submitted by burley tobacco growers and other interested persons."

Rep. Perkins said that "tobacco growers are having a hard enough time going. We've got to help them, and I wanted the Department of Agriculture to know how they feel about just the possibility of losing production controls on burley."

New project is begun in Phase I at Nicholas Elementary School

The week of Oct. 14, marked the beginning of a Career Education project at the Elementary School. It is the purpose of the project to show the relation between subject matter taught in the school and "the world of work."

Prior to Monday, an orientation program was given to prepare the students for the new project. At this time, students were requested to take a pre-test survey, "How I See Myself."

The Career Education project will center around the cluster, Agri-Business and will be involving parents of students in Phase I, an occupational field trip to various farms and businesses are also planned. Teachers involved in the program are: Charly Griffith, Judy Hogue, Kathy Martin, Pam Sample, and Marjorie Wilson.

If anyone would be interested in knowing more about the Career Education project, please contact Judy Hogue, counselor at the Elementary School.
