Kay's Kitchen

— — By Kay Fisher — — —

Surely we will be having some warm pretty days left in September. I for one am not ready to give up summer even though the mornings may be a bit chilly and there is "that feeling" in the air. I want to hang on to those summer vegetables, salads, and light cooking as long as possible. We will have all too long to think of pot roasts, hearty soups and making each cut of meat go as far as possible. Speaking of soups here is one that is really a summer soup but is good any time. Especially now while you probably have plenty of the ingredients on hand. This recipe was given to me by a dear friend who told me her husband tried it gingerly then with a smile asked for a second helping. So though it is a cold soup, it is not just ladies luncheon food.

GAZPACHO SOUP

½ cup cucumber
½ cup peeled tomatoes
¼ cup green peppers
¼ cup pimiento
¼ cup onion
¼ cup celery
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons vinegar

Finely chop all ingredients and place in quart jar. Fill jar with tomato juice. Add salt and pepper to taste. Refrigerate overnight. Stir well before serving.

This may be doubled easily if you have a half gallon jar, or you may make several quart jars full. I found it is better not to keep it too long, but make it often. At times I have added more seasoning. A dash of Tobasco really sets it off. Just don't over do it. The taste of the fresh vegetables is what really makes it delicious.

This next recipe is timely since it calls for the vegetables one might still have on hand.

VEGETABLE BAKE

1 pound small fresh mushrooms
4 medium size zucchini, cut in ½ inch slices
4 medium size green peppers, cut in 1 inch squares
1 cup coarsely chopped onion
4 tomatoes, peeled, chopped
1 cup celery, chopped
2 teaspoons oregano leaves
good pinch of thyme
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
½ cup olive oil, you may use salad oil
2 cups fresh green beans, cooked until crisp tender
1 cup grated snappy cheese

Rinse, dry and trim stems and caps of fresh mushrooms. Arrange alternate layers of mushrooms, zucchini, green pepper, onion, tomato, beans and celery in baking dish. Sprinkle each layer with oregano, thyme, salt and pepper. Drizzle olive oil over each layer. Cover and bake about 45 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Spoon vegetable juices over contents several times during baking. When nearly done sprinkle cheese on top and bake until cheese melts.

Serve with any meat. All you need with this would be a good tasty bread. For now I would suggest Garlic Buttered Erench bread.

Here is another hot vegetable platter that is almost a meal in itself. This is good served with bologna as the meat. I just brown the slices of bologna quickly in butter and stack at one end of a meat platter. Use the other end of the platter to serve hot biscuits.

HOT VEGETABLE PLATTER

1 head cauliflower
1 pound carrots, cut in thin strips
2 tablespoons margarine
2 packages frozen green beans, or 1 can green beans, drained
½ cup milk
2 cups grated sharp cheese
4 tomatoes cut in thick slices
3 or 4 slices bacon cooked crisp, and crumbled

Cook whole cauliflower, covered in small amount of boiling salted water about 30 minutes. Meanwhile cook carrots in salted water until tender. Drain, add 1 tablespoon margarine. Cook frozen beans according to package directions; drain and add remaining margarine. If canned beans are used, cook and season to taste.

In saucepan stir milk into cheese and heat slowly till mixture is smooth and cheese melted. Add seasoning to cheese sauce if desired.

Place cauliflower in center of chop plate and surround with vegetables: carrots, beans, and tomato slices. Drizzle a little of the cheese sauce over the cauliflower, then the bacon. Pass remaining cheese sauce after everyone is served.

Vegetables left from this vegetable platter can be made into a delicious creamy soup, using the cheese sauce and all.

In a large saucepan cook ¼ cup chopped onion in 4 tablespoons margarine until tender but not brown. Blend in ¼ cup flour, 3 cups chicken broth, (can be made with 3 chicken bouillion cubes and 3 cups boiling water), 2 cups milk, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce and 1 cup shredded cheese. Cook and stir until mixture thickens slightly. Add left over vegetables, and sauce. You may add any other compatable vegetable to this mixture. Serve hot. Sprinkle chopped chives over each serving. Left over French bread heated in the oven until crisp is good served with this. If you find yourself lacking enough vegetables, add a package of cooked mixed vegetables. Be sure to season the mixed vegetables as you cook them before adding to the soup.

Dear Debbie

Letters to DEBORAH WHITE

Dear Debbie:

I think I'm as liberal as the next guy, but when I asked my girlfriend to marry me and she said yes, but that she'd like to keep her own name instead of taking mine, I hit the ceiling. I think this woman's lib has gone too far. Just try and imagine all the legal and technical problems it creates for a woman to change her father's name. I feel that if I'm legally responsible for anything my wife does, then she can at least honor me by taking my name. Even if I find a way to accept this, what happens with: our joint income tax, checking into a hotel as man and wife, driver's license, Social Security, charge cards, etc.?

Perplexed

Dear Perplexed:

If you can find a way to accept your girlfriend's sincere desire to keep her name—and remember, her desire to retain her own identity does not reflect on her love for you or her devotion as a wife—then let everybody else, including the income tax people, take care of themselves.

Dear Debbie:

What can be done about my 105-year-old grandmother who is driving my mother wild? I hate to say it because it probably isn't her fault, but my grandmother is a cantankerous old woman who is often vicious and spiteful. My mother is 75 years old and she cooks every day for her mother and brings the food over only to come back in tears because of the names my grandmother calls her. We've all tried to talk to my grandmother, into going into a senior citizens home, but she refuses outright and calls us selfish and uncaring. She's a proud woman who says she doesn't need our sympathy or charity. This whole thing is really overwhelming.

Sincere Granddaughter

Dear Sincere:

Your problem is not a new one, yet as familiar as it is to all of us, the answers still remain complex. Fine-tuned, 105-year-olds are able to care for themselves, no matter how vital they are physically and mentally. Try and get your family doctor in on this; he may have a few good suggestions. You might be able to alleviate the condition with a nurse or companion.

* * *

PERSONAL TO EDDIE: Today most of the accepted standards of boy-girl exchange are being challenged. Still, if your "mystery girl" continues to call, you should take steps to have her stopped—including calling the police.

If you have a problem, sometimes it helps to air it. Write to me in care of this newspaper. Personal replies aren't always possible, but I'll answer the letters of widest interest in this column.
