7¾%
Interest guaranteed with no current tax and principal guaranteed — payable on demand.

Still searching for the best way to protect your money? A fixed annuity investment might be the answer. It offers a combination of features that may fit your current financial goals.

Here are some of its main features:
—Your 7¾% annual interest is guaranteed* for 5 years on the net sum invested.
—Principal is 100% guaranteed.*
—Your entire account—or any part of it– is payable on demand.
—Tax on the interest is deferred until you redeem the account.

Should you wish, you may also transfer any or all of your invested money at a later date to a variable annuity plan — with the opportunity for capital appreciation, without current tax liability or an additional sales charge. Or you may begin by investing in the variable annuity.

To learn more about this appealing investment opportunity, call the nearest Bache office. Or return the coupon.

SHERIFF'S SALE

By virtue of judgment of the Harrison Circuit Court in favor of New City Packing and against Denver Kirby, to me directed, I will on Saturday, the 23rd day of August, 1975, at the hour of 1:30 P.M. at the Nicholas County Court House door expose to public sale to the highest and best bidder, all of Denver Kirby's interest (being the interest of a tenant by the entirety) in the following described real estate in Nicholas County, Kentucky:

A certain tract or parcel of land in the Headquarters Section of Nicholas County, Kentucky, more particularly described as follows:

Bounded on the north by Larry Woosley, on the west by Strawder McDonald, on the south by Strawder McDonald and on the east by the Headquarters-Saltwell Road, containing 82 acres, more or less.

This is EXCEPTED from the foregoing a small tract of ground north of the barn which Mae Kenney reserved in a deed dated Dec. 14, 1972, of record in Deed Book 84, page 678 Nicholas County Clerk's Office described as follows: Commencing at a corner in the Headquarters Saltwell Road and Larry Woosley and running in a westerly direction along the line of Larry Woosley 133 feet to a stake; thence in a northerly direction along the line of the above land 78 feet to a stake; thence in an easterly direction along the land described in a deed to a corner with the Headquarters Saltwell Road in a northerly direction 140 feet to the beginning.

And will proceed to sell said interest in real estate to satisfy the judgment of said court and the costs thereon, to the highest and best bidder, for cash due on date of sale.

Never Say Never

"Never cross the street without looking."

"Never drive on the wrong side of the road."

All of us have heard these words of wisdom at one time or another. They make good sense when they come from safety experts, who are accustomed to deal in broad generalizations.

But it's a different story in the courtroom. Courts, to do justice, must deal with specific individuals in specific situations. Courts deal with exceptions and anomalies and extenuating circumstances. And courts hardly ever say never.

Here are a few reasons why:

Crossing the street without looking was justifiable, one court ruled, because the pedestrian was relying on a green light.

Boarding a moving trolley was all right, ruled another court, because the passenger got a comealong wave from the conductor.

Driving on the wrong side of the road was permissible, ruled another court, because the motorist had to swerve to avoid hitting a child.

One judge who said never—and lived to regret it—was the famous Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. In a case involving a truck-train collision, Holmes held that a motorist who comes to a blind crossing should never proceed without first getting out of his car and walking forward to check the tracks.

This rule, he said with finality, would settle the matter "once and for all."

But the Holmes rule lasted less than seven years. So many exceptions arose, poking holes in his logic, that the Supreme Court finally had to throw it out.

The incident might well have reminded a chastened Holmes of a warning he himself had once voiced against overconfidence.

"We have been reckless," he had said, "of many things that were not so."

Never Say Never

"Never cross the street without looking."

"Never drive on the wrong side of the road."

All of us have heard these words of wisdom at one time or another. They make good sense when they come from safety experts, who are accustomed to deal in broad generalizations.

But it's a different story in the courtroom. Courts, to do justice, must deal with specific individuals in specific situations. Courts deal with exceptions and anomalies and extenuating circumstances. And courts hardly ever say never.

Here are a few reasons why:

Crossing the street without looking was justifiable, one court ruled, because the pedestrian was relying on a green light.

Boarding a moving trolley was all right, ruled another court, because the passenger got a come-along wave from the conductor.

Driving on the wrong side of the road was permissible, ruled another court, because the motorist had to swerve to avoid hitting a child.

One judge who said never—and lived to regret it—was the famous Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. In a case involving a truck-train collision, Holmes held that a motorist who comes to a blind crossing should never proceed without first getting out of his car and walking forward to check the tracks.

This rule, he said with finality, would settle the matter "once and for all."

But the Holmes rule lasted less than seven years. So many exceptions arose, poking holes in his logic, that the Supreme Court finally had to throw it out.

The incident might well have reminded a chastened Holmes of a warning he himself had once voiced against overconfidence.

"We have been reckless," he had said, "of many things that were not so."

Dear Debbie

Letters to DEBORAH WHITE

DEAR DEBBIE:

I'm probably late, as usual, with my beef, but I got to get something off my chest. Ever since this whole Watergate mess and events leading up to the resignation of our President, people have been looking at everybody and everything with suspicion. Everybody around my place calls me "the politician" because I'm after people to go vote and to care about what's going on in our country. I think it's wrong that our political system should take a bad rap for a couple of bad apples. I think there are some great men in politics right now, men who work hard to get a job done and I'm only sorry some of these guys might go down the drain when it might have been otherwise if people weren't so short-sighted.

HANK

DEAR HANK

I'm with you, that's why I published your letter. There are indeed men on several levels of politics who are worth supporting, and working for. Think of the people who now believe all of politics is corrupt, and ask yourself how any of them would feel if everyone were to turn their back on them because they may have been someone in their past or present whose reputation has been ruined. We all know someone – even remotely – who may have made a mistake in the past, but that's no reason to tune us out.

* * *

DEAR DEBBIE:

A few years ago my wife and I split up and I took a small garden apartment in another town. I thought I'd disappear into the honeycomb of apartment living for a while and try to find my ego after it was shattered during my marriage. Well, it didn't take long for me to find out that if you want privacy, the last thing to do is to move into an apartment house. The old ladies on each floor meet every afternoon down around the little fish pond near the elevator and there they gossip about everybody – including me. The other night on my way in, one of the old girls winked at me and said, "Had a rough night last night, didn't you, Sonny?" It really bothers me to think I'm living in a fish bowl, but the idea of moving back to suburbia really knocks me out. How do I get people to mind their own business?

KIRK

DEAR KIRK:

You don't. If you want to live where people are around to see you coming and going (and believe me, that's true practically everywhere), then you've got to get a big city thick-skinned as to what people might be saying about you. By the way, how do you know what the ladies are talking about down by the little fish pool in the lobby?

* * *

PERSONAL TO LOU:

If you keep driving with one hand you're likely to run into the altar. Get both your hands on the wheel, you're too young yet.

* * *

If you have a problem, write to me in care of this newspaper. Personal replies aren't always possible, but I'll answer letters of widest interest in this column.

EVERYTIME I BUY A USED CAR I GET TAKEN FOR A RIDE

NEXT WEEK'S HOROSCOPE

By Clay R. Pollan

Note planetary ruler of your birth symbol

FOR WEEK BEGINNING MONDAY, AUG. 18, 1975

★ If your birthday occurs this week . . .

. . . you are serious-minded, self-effacing, untrusting and easily depressed. You are knowledgeable in many fields, with a high moral sense. It would be good for you to develop a more cheerful outlook. You meet obstacles and difficulties with courage and know when to call it "quits" but your best relationship is with Leo.

♈ Aries | Mar. 21 - Apr. 19 | Pluto ♇

This period holds forth every promise of being a lively and interesting week. Active aspects will keep you on the go both mentally and physically. You'll find yourself dropping in on acquaintances and socializing more than usual. Emphasis is on change, variety and travel opportunity. Practice the Golden Rule.

♉ Taurus | Apr. 20 - May 20 | Venus ♀

The danger of your being drawn into arguments and controversy is apparent. There could be some threat of legal action or litigation. Be patient in sorting out difficulties and differences. It's not wise to play games where affairs of the heart are concerned. Get rid of any tendency to harbor grudges.

♊ Gemini | May 21 - June 20 | Mercury ☿

You may find it necessary to reorganize along fresh lines. Career progress may well be afflicted in important ways because the people you are associated with may drop out or be replaced. Broaden your horizons. Avoid the petty. Take changes in stride and plan ahead. Longings can be fulfilled.

♋ Cancer | June 21 - July 22 | Moon ☽

There is obvious need for caution over family and business matters. For instance, family feuds can far too easily be fanned into flames. A business complication could get you involved in a major way. Your judgment is put to test. Eventual success is indicated. Know this and act like you know it.

♌ Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22 | Sun ☉

Friendships prosper now. And new love may bloom. Your spirit of goodwill proves catching. You say the right things at the proper time. People surprise you with tokens of affection. Make the most of your wit and charm–in the right quarters. Good luck is connected with the written or spoken word.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22 | Mercury ☿

This week promises to bring either a pleasing, cheerful item of news, or a visitor you are happy to see. The news you receive may suggest new ways of earning more money. Entertain visitors in your home and call on a phone of hospitality they won't forget. A romantic promise will be fulfilled.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22 | Venus ♀

There is much to be said in favor of trying to build up goodwill with your associates. They will almost certainly make friendly approaches. A happy understanding could be a great advantage when you are in need of temporary help. Coordinate activities. Don't wander too far afield. Correct safety hazards.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21 | Mars ♂

A general tendency to feel flat and disinterested is indicated. It is more likely to be due to frustrations in getting people to do the things you want in the way you want. Ignore rumors. Stick to factual information. Have implicit confidence in your ability and individuals in authority are on your side.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21 | Jupiter ♃

It is obvious that you need care in protecting your interests in a general way. It will be best for you to be over-trusting. Give special preference to people who've proved trustworthy in the past. Work behind the scenes quietly and don't be too conspicuous. Some changes are necessary.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan. 19 | Saturn ♄

You will find that there is a good cash flow this week. Aspects are right for settling details of a partnership agreement. Give serious thought to propositions which provide for future security. Ideal time for backing your fancy or tips that friends give. Go ahead if thinking of getting an estimate.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 20 - Feb. 18 | Uranus ♅

A time for checking and correcting. Workmates are going to be slack, careless, neglectful of your interests. This may temporarily slow progress down. In face of difficulties, success will surely come, provided you do not let domestic issues bog you down
