More than 400 local and state government officials, representing all areas of Kentucky, were at the Galt House in Louisville Aug. 5-8 for the Governor's Third Annual Local Government Issues Conference. County Attorney Joseph H. Conley attended from Nicholas county.

The conference, sponsored by Gov. Julian M. Carroll and the Kentucky Office for Local Government, provided a forum for local officials to discuss the broad range of problems in the daily operation of government services. Its purpose was to make state government, its personnel and programs more accessible and understandable to public officials who are affected by them.

A series of workshops on topics of interest and relevance to local officials was held on Thursday.

The cabinet secretaries lead discussions of specific programs administered by their respective departments and the programs' impact on local government.

During the luncheon session, U.S. Senator Walter D. Huddleston addressed the group on "Federal Activities Toward Building Better Bridges."

Dr. M. M. Mester, Jr., assistant secretary for community planning and development in the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), gave a presentation on community development during a special session.

Mrs. Becker attends supervisors' meet

School administrators from around the Commonwealth attended a conference on instructional supervision in local districts. Those suggestions will be used by the Department of Education's Bureau of Instruction to formulate a state plan and guidelines for instructional supervision, according to Garland Kemper, director of supervision and accreditation for the Bureau of Instruction.

The conference was held at the recommendation of the State Advisory Council for Supervision, a group appointed last March by the Governor. Ginger, superintendent of public instruction.

Conference participants developed a list of suggestions for improving instructional supervision in local districts. These suggestions will be used by the Department of Education's Bureau of Instruction to formulate a state plan and guidelines for instructional supervision, according to Garland Kemper, director of supervision and accreditation for the Bureau of Instruction.

Most Kentucky school systems employ instructional supervisors who work with teachers to improve instructional methods.

Burley production up

Burley tobacco production in Kentucky is estimated at 441,800,000 pounds, 2% above 1974 and 48% above the short 1973 crop. Average yield is forecast at 2500 pounds from 188,000 acres. By Aug. 1, 24% of the crop was blooming and 4% was topped. Dry weather during July slowed growth to a near standstill, especially in Bluegrass and Central Kentucky counties. Rains over the weekend of Aug. 5-8 relieved the dry weather stress. Losses from disease and hail have been no more than normal. Black shank has been serious to a few communities. For the Burley Belt (Kentucky and seven nearby states) production is expected to total 693.2 million pounds compared with 612.6 million in 1974. Yield for the Belt is expected to average 2800 pounds. Last year the Belt yield was 2540 pounds per acre.
