Dear Debbie

LETTERS to DEBORAH WHITE. DEAR DEBBIE: I married a widower who has six grandchildren. He invites them over all the time but I cannot invite my children for a meal even though I buy some of the food. When I have invited my children for a meal, "Now what do I want?" I wash, iron, cook, clean the house and attend to my own children. He would have me do nothing for him. Who would share his belongings? If he should die before me it'd just walk out and leave me with nothing. The Bible says to forsake all others when you marry and cleave to your wife. What do you answer? TROUBLED

NOTICE

My wife really used to turn me on, but during the past few years she's gained about 50 pounds and she's completely, she's only 35 but looks like 80. I seldom feel like making love to her now and even though I love her, she says it's because I'm playing around but that never stopped her before. She can't always see me straight. The more weight she puts on, the less woman she is. She always reads your column so maybe you can set her straight. LIKES 'EM SKINNY
