Sgt. Top Lyons serves in Hawaii

Army First Sergeant Eugene Lyons of Carlisle, is "topkick" of Headquarters Company, 25th Infantry Division, U.S. Army, Hawaii. Swaying back and forth with the ancient grace of a Hawaiian Tree, his massive form cradling a clipboard, "Top" squints over a familiar early morning report.

He has looked over this same assemblage of men, disgruntled faces on stumpy, gangly, fat, trim and skinnier bodies for 18 months in Hawaii. A Borderick Crawford-like expression belies the paternal affect he holds for them.

In 2 1/2 years of service, 17 as a noncommissioned officer, Top has let the Army become an extension of family for him. He eats, sleeps and breathes the military. It's as much a part of him as his limbs.

"Fall in!" he suddenly erupts in his Kentucky drawl. "Attention report!"

For Sgt. Lyons, this is the first daily chore of a job he's virtually married to. His is a job many E's refuse to consider because of duty hours and even weekends are not sacred.

Top enjoys and nurtures the rapport he's won with the men in his company. It isn't like the "old Army," he pointed out, when "you'd hardly ever see an NCO talking with a private."

However, Top maintains the delicate balance between fraternity and authority.

"I fraternize with the privates," he allowed, "but when I have a mission for them they know I'm their sergeant."

Today's soldier, Top noted, no longer accepts all he is told on a "no-questions-asked" basis. He pointed out that soldiers now are more individually oriented.

The sergeant cited higher education levels and pay scales as reasons for this change in soldier character.

Sgt. Lyons, whose mother, Mrs. Ellen F. Lyons, lives on Route 2, has no plans for retirement. In fact, he recently re-enlisted.

His wife, Carol, is with him in Hawaii. Top's advice to young enlisted men is to stay in. "You'll never find a more compatible job, salary and life style than the Army."

Three convicted in bank robbery

Three persons were convicted in United States District Court at Lexington on Sept. 3 on charges of conspiring to negotiate a quantity of traveler's checks stolen in the June 11 robbery of the Farmer's Exchange Bank of Millersburg.

Convicted were Donna June Thomas, 25, of 163 Virginia Avenue and 129 Leader Avenue, Lexington; Dennis Alfred Hess, 22, 163 Virginia Avenue, Lexington; and Donald Ray Poole, 21, 168 Leader Avenue, Lexington.

Assistant United States Attorney John M. Compton detailed that investigation revealed that these defendants, along with Paula Singleton, came into possession of approximately $13,000 in stolen traveler's checks stolen in the bank robbery and embarked on a "trek" from Lexington to Florida to New Orleans and other places and cashed at about $4,000 worth of the traveler's checks before being apprehended. Compton further detailed that additional traveler's checks continue to be turned in from the cashing spree.

Judge Bernard T. Moynahan Jr. sentenced Hess and Poole to the custody of the Attorney General for a period of five years following a 90-day observation and evaluation by the Bureau of Prisons. Paula Singleton had previously been sentenced to a similar term of five years.
