Cancer Drive underway here

A little bright blue leaflet will be turning up in 40 million homes during April when American Cancer Society volunteers launch the 1976 educational and fund-raising Crusade.

Bill Donovan, local Crusade chairman says workers will be ringing doorbells to hand out the leaflet which carries the Seven Warning Signals of Cancer. Anyone who is familiar with the Warning Signals can more easily spot cancer in its early, treatable stages.

"The leaflet's special focus is on breast cancer," he adds, "which is the foremost malignancy striking American women today."

The leaflet's breast cancer message is in the form of seven pertinent questions. These are:

1. Can a woman help protect herself against breast cancer?
 2. Can a blow or injury cause breast cancer?
 3. Does breast cancer usually appear as a lump or thickening?
 4. Do women themselves discover most breast cancer?
 5. Are all breast lumps cancer?
 6. Should a woman wait to see if a lump grows?
 7. When breast cancer is found and treated early are the chances of cure good?
- The leaflet gives the answers. The American Cancer Society estimates there are about 82,000 new
