FRANKFORT—Curtailments of natural gas are the prospect for this winter due to expected reductions in natural gas supplies from interstate pipelines, according to Damon W. Harrison, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Energy.

"Major distributors such as Western Kentucky Gas, Louisville Gas and Electric and Columbia Gas of Kentucky have developed plans to curtail several user categories—particularly industrial," Commissioner Harrison said.

"The Kentucky Department of Energy is cooperating closely with the gas utilities in the development of curtailment plans that will allow industry to operate at the highest possible level.

"The key objective is to meet the essential energy needs of people while at the same time keeping employment at the highest possible level."

Unfortunately, Harrison said, Kentuckians have become complacent about the availability of natural gas.

"The cutbacks announced during the past two winters were less severe than anticipated and this has created a feeling that 'well' was being cried," Harrison said.

He said unusually warm winters and economic recession reduced energy demand and made available emergency supplies of gas from Texas, which otherwise would have been used by the chemical industry.

"The economy is regaining its vigor and the winter of 1976-77 may be less balmy. In that case, he warned, the natural gas problem will intensify. But it still is manageable in Kentucky.

To be manageable, Harrison said, conservation of natural gas is essential to maintain adequate supplies for industries, which will improve chances of preserving the employment level.

Harrison suggested Kentuckians can conserve natural gas by:

- Keeping thermostats no higher than 68 degrees this winter.
- Turning off any outside gas lights.
- Heating water only to the degree needed.
- Insulating homes.

Another aspect of the natural gas situation that has attracted a great deal of attention is the Federal Power

MRS. JAMES DIXON

Mrs. Florence White Dixon, 53, of Robertson county, died at 4:30 a.m. Thursday, Aug. 19, 1978 in the Nicholas County Hospital after a long illness.

She was a native of Robertson county and a daughter of Mrs. Annie White of Brooksville and the late Herbert White. She was a member of the New Central Christian Church in Robertson county.

Survivors besides her mother, are her husband, James Dixon; two daughters, Mrs. Jimmy Cooper of Sardis; Mrs. Kenneth Earbywine of Mt. Olive; and four sons, James Dixon of Mayfield; Jerry Dixon of Flemingsburg; Bobby and Tony Dixon, at home; five grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Beale Heiler of Brooksville; Mrs. Florida Moore of Mt. Olive; five brothers, Joe White Jr. of Mayfield; Stanley and Bennie White, both of Mt. Olive; Herbert White Jr. of Augusta and Don White of Flemingsburg.

Services were conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 21 at the Kain and Kabler Funeral Home in Mt. Olive with the Rev. James McCann of Falmouth officiating. Burial in the Mt. Olive Cemetery.

Harrison said it is hoped this increase will slow the decline in the volume of interstate gas available through pipelines, and to cause some interstate gas to become available in the interstate market because of higher prices.

Most of Kentucky's gas comes from interstate sources—primarily Texas and Louisiana.

This decision will cause an increase in natural gas prices, but the PSC estimates the average consumer's gas bill will go up by only five to six per cent or about $15.60 this year.

"There is considerable confusion about this decision, which temporarily is stopped by a court order," Harrison said.

"That part of the FPC decision which allows the wellhead price of natural gas to be newly produced or newly committed for interstate transmission to increase from 25 cents per 1,000 cubic feet to $1.42 has aroused the greatest interest," he said. Actually, some gas still has a wellhead ceiling of 29.5 cents, other gas at 52 cents and still others at $1.51.
