As Snow Comes Down, Bills Go Up.

Your electric bills may be higher this winter than over the past few months, because you use more electricity in different ways.

To minimize energy costs, we suggest you:

- Clean filters of forced-air systems monthly. Dirty filters restrict air flow.
- Close the damper on your fireplace when it's not in use. Heat pours up an open chimney.
- Make sure storm windows and doors fit properly and keep them closed as much as possible.
- Install adequate insulation and set your thermostat at 68 degrees.

Lights may burn longer as you get up in the dark and come home after dark.

You may stay home more during leisure hours, using electricity for everything from cooking bigger meals to watching more TV.
