Two county homes destroyed by fire
The Nicholas County Fire Department fought two bad fires last week according to Fire Chief, Woody Wilson.

Last Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 1, they were called to the residence of Bill Wigglesworth on the Bald Hill Road. The dwelling house and two out buildings were totally destroyed by a fire that started in the kitchen, according to Wilson.

On Saturday, Dec. 4 the county department managed to save a large meat house and one outbuilding from a

Burnaw to retire effective Dec. 31

J. Berry Burnaw, Nicholas County Clerk, will retire Dec. 31 because of ill health after over 19 years of service to the people of this county.

Judge Mildred Clark read Burnaw's letter of resignation to the Fiscal Court at its regular meeting last Wednesday, and the resignation was accepted. Burnaw recommended his deputy, Rose Scott, as his replacement.

Judge Clark will appoint Burnaw's successor after she receives certification from Circuit Judge John P. Lair that the Circuit Clerk, Beulah Hughes, candidate and finds the candidate qualified.

Burnaw was born in Nicholas county about one mile from Carlisle on the East Union Road, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Burnaw. A farmer before he became County Clerk in 1950, he is married to the former Arnette Gagner. They have two sons, Fred who is a local businessman, and James H., vice president of Dun and Bradstreet, who resides in Atlanta, Ga.

The Burnaws, who attend the Carlisle United Methodist Church, live at 304 Kennedy Heights and have one grand son, William, in Atlanta.
