

The Bill of Rights

Article I. Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Article II. A well-regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed.

Article III. No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house, without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

Article IV. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Article V. No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia when actually engaged in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

Article VI. In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense.

Article VII. In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.

Article VIII. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

Article IX. The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

Article X. The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people.

Great American Happenings

By permission of THE BETTMANN ARCHIVE

1774: While the British bungle, the colonists unite. There is no talking to the King. The "Boston Tea Party" has outraged him. But instead of acting sensibly, he's out to punish us. He closes the port of Boston. Forbids town meetings without his governor's permission. Turns our public buildings into barracks for his troops. For years, Ben Franklin has urged us to come together. Now, these intolerable acts convince us.

On September 5th, our first Continental Congress meets in Philadelphia. John and Samuel Adams. Patrick Henry. Fifty-six good men from twelve colonies who even now want harmony with Great Britain. We petition the King and brand his acts as infringements and violations of our rights. Even our children take a stand. They complain to General Gage himself that his soldiers have been breaking their sleds. Plenty is brewing in Boston.

1775: The clash is coming. Patrick Henry has never been one to hold his tongue. Ten years ago, he spoke out against the notorious Stamp Act in the Virginia House of Burgesses. They called him a first brand. Some accused him of typoson. But he spoke until the older, comfortable conservatives finally got off their seats and backed his resolution to condemn the taxes. The storm clouds had thickened over these ten years. By now, they're about to explode. And Patrick Henry's words are still moving us toward the cloudburst. Today, he is not only eloquent, but prophetic. "I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give me liberty or give me death!" In just one month, we'll face our first clash of arms at Lexington. Our first fight for liberty. &

A history of bell ringing

game. English gentlemen even formed clubs to promote this hobby. London ringers, in 1827, formed the Society of College Youths, now called the Ancient Society of College Youths perhaps more because of the age of the members than the age of the club itself.

Seventeenth century Puritanism brought an end to the fun, at least temporarily. The restoration revived ringers's social acceptability and even increased its popularity. Non-puritan authorities endorsed it, again, as a suitable sport for the gentry, the rich installed dumb-bells at home to get extra practice and the bells became the center of village social life.

As trade grew in this century, ringers spread to the colonies, almost as widely as in England. Old North Church in Boston imported the original Philadelphia State House bell in 1740, and Christ Church in Philadelphia imported a set ten years later. Paul Revere joined the first American change ringing group in 1750. Change ringing in Boston, however, barely survived his death.

Since then ringing has suffered its ups and downs in both England and the United States. In the United States church bells are still used to strike the hours, for fire alarms and to call communities to worship.

Perhaps the most famous single American bell is the Liberty Bell. Cast in 1751 by Thomas Liston of Whitechapel, London, the bell arrived in Philadelphia in August, 1752.

Even before the bell proclaimed the Declaration of Independence in July, 1776, it had changed defiance of British trade restrictions and announced the Boston Tea Party. During the course of the Revolutionary War, the bell pealed joyfully for American victories. Later it tolled the deaths of Washington, Jefferson, Adams and the other Founding Fathers.

Forty-one years before the centennial of their independence, the Liberty Bell cracked and attempts to repair it were unsuccessful. Other than the original Philadelphia State House bell had 100 years earlier. Bell's of all sizes were commissioned for this purpose and many again rang of liberty on July 4, 1876.

Symbol of America's freedom for 200 years, the Liberty Bell was to be baptized ceremonially at 2:00 p.m. (EDT) this Fourth of July. The bells of the American Revolution from churches across the land—from bell towers, government buildings and college campuses—will ring out at the same moment.

Local student views Washington during the Bicentennial Year

(Editor's Note: The following article was written especially for this Bicentennial issue. We asked Miss Sugg, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. Dallas Sugg, to do so after her recent Washington trip. She is a high school freshman at Nicholas County High in the fall.)

by Alexa Sugg

My parents and I recently visited Washington, D.C. on our vacation. I will tell you about it the way I saw it. Washington, D.C. is one of the most beautiful cities we have in the United States. It is especially lively this Bicentennial year.

There are many famous places outside of Washington, D.C. We stayed at one, in Andrews, Md., across from Andrews Air Force Base.

On our tour, our first stop was the Capitol. In the dome we saw rices raised around the top talking about the founding of the New World, the structure of our laws, the Revolution, the Civil War, and the two World Wars. We also visited the House of Representatives meeting room.

From the Capitol we went to the Supreme Court. There we saw the courtroom from cases are heard. This is the only courtroom in the building. One of the places I enjoyed most was the Smithsonian Institute. There we saw the First Ladies dresses, the ball of a Civil Rights march in houses of different periods in time, and we also saw Columbus' clock. Time did not permit us to spend as much time there as we would have liked.

We went to the White House where we saw portraits of Presidents and their First Ladies. There were many pieces of antiques, silver and gold dating back to Washington's time.

From the Capitol we saw the Lincoln Memorial and Arlington Cemetery. One of the most impressive experiences I had while in Washington was the Changing of the Guard at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery.

We saw the infamous Watergate Apartment Complex, which is still in use, with restaurants, boutiques, antique shops, and offices. The apartment complex is still in use.

The above original 13 state medal set, is a one-in-a-lifetime chance to purchase a Bicentennial collection. Minted in 18 karat gold, gold on sterling silver, sterling silver, and bronze, the set has just recently been produced. Information on this set and Bicentennial Medals from other states may be obtained by writing the Bicentennial Medal Program, 7115 Northdale Parkway, Suite 178, Atlanta, Ga. 30327.
