1790: A plan we could bank on.

There's plenty of disagreement in Washington's Cabinet. And out of it, Mr. Hamilton, our Federalist Secretary of the Treasury, is in the throes of creating a financial plan to pay off our war debts and make us look more confident to the rest of the world. He comes up with everything from a tariff to a National Bank, chartered by Congress to be the government's financial agent. Secretary of State Tom Jefferson and his Republicans oppose the bank. After all, he says, chartering a bank is not one of the Constitutional powers given to Congress. Besides, who knows what the capitalists will do once they get the President and Congress into their control? After months of debate, Hamilton persuades Washington to sign the bill. But the Republicans stop the bank's recharter twenty years later. We're beginning to learn that the nation's economy doesn't always run smoothly. 8
