Local flag owners asked to fly flags June 14 thru July 4

Merchants and individuals in Carlisle-Nicholas County are being asked to fly the United States Flag daily starting on Flag Day, June 14, through July 4 in celebration of this year's Bicentennial. The request is being made by Mrs. Warren Fisher and Joseph H. Conley, local Bicentennial co-chairmen.

The Carlisle Jaycees will put up the flags, as they usually do on holidays, and the merchants are being asked to take in their flags daily before dusk and to put them out again the next day—including Sundays—through July 4.

The Jaycees will collect the flags on July 5. Flying the flags downtown on Sundays will require that the merchant make a special trip to town that day in order to do so. He is also being asked to remove his flag at night—unless it is fully lighted.

Accident causes injury

Mrs. Bowen returns to work Monday

Mrs. Gayle Bowen, owner and operator of Bowen's Florist in Carlisle, was back at work Monday after having spent two days as a patient at St. Joseph Hospital in Lexington due to a twisted back she suffered Wednesday when the station wagon she was driving collided with a Nicholas county dump truck and a car.

According to Mrs. Bowen, she was attempting to turn left from Sycamore Street onto Main Street and didn't see the dump truck on Main Street which was being driven by Kenneth Ismael. She hit the truck in the left front, the impact causing her foot to hit the accelerator. She then lost control on the rain slickered street and collided with an automobile belonging to Merrill J. Hollar of Nicholas county, which was parked in front of the Carlisle Post Office. Her Oldsmobile station wagon stopped in the yard of the post office. Mrs. Bowen was taken to the Nicholas County Hospital and then transferred to the Lexington hospital where she remained a patient until Friday.

The Hollar car suffered damage beyond repair and the dump truck only slight damage, according to Allen

Earlywine, Carlisle Police Chief. Mrs. Bowen said, Monday, that her station wagon suffered damages of approximately $1,000.

Effective July 1

Rev. Eyster named Presbyterian minister

Rev. W. Bertelle Eyster, 324 Sycamore Street, has been named as Stated Supply at the Carlisle Presbyterian Church. He will assume the ministry on July 1 for one year.

Rev. Eyster will also continue in his position as Director of Administrative Services, Wedco District Health Department with headquarters in Paris.

hands, is a hamster, whose gender has yet to be determined. Mary Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Hollar and lives on Second Street.—Aundra Mann photo

Three Montgomery men arraigned in Dr. Hamon's office burglary Saturday

Two Montgomery county men were charged with third degree burglary and one with accessory before the fact when they were arraigned before the Carlisle City Court Monday night, June 7. The charges stem from a burglary Saturday night at the office of Dr. Allen Hamon on South Broadway.

According to Allen Earlywine, Carlisle Police Chief, police officers caught one of the men inside the office with a large quantity of drugs nearby about 11:45 p.m., Saturday night. Another was apprehended as he ran from the scene. He said they gained entry by breaking a hole in a window near the alley and reaching in to unlock it.

The three are scheduled to appear before the City Court Tuesday night, June 15.

First aqualift swim suit

Swimming Hall of Fame gets new swim suit

FORT LAUDERDALE—A new swim suit is on display in a place of honor at the International Swimming Hall of Fame here.

Although it is one of thousands of swim suits in the aquatic shrine this suit happens to be very special; it is the first Aqualift Swim Suit manufactured in the Special Olympics pattern for mentally and physically handicapped swimmers.

The unusual garment was presented to ISHOF by Wayne Shumate, board chairman of Blue Grass Industries, Inc., of Carlisle, developers of the suit that was invented by an Australian legiard.

In accepting the suit for the Hall, Buck Dawson, executive director, said, "This unique suit will hold a place of prominence in the Hall of Fame. It represents the hopes of handicapped people the world over to enjoy the opportunity of the thrill of athletic competition."

The ceremonies followed a demonstration of the suit's qualities by famed Olympic gold medalist Donna deVarona in the Hall of Fame pool with two handicapped children. The swimming great (two gold medals in 1964) explained that the inflatable low pressure air cushion built in the front gives added support for the swimmer, whether an infant or a 250-pound adult.

It is a teaching aid, not a life preserver, that enables the teacher to reduce the air pressure as the swimmer gains in proficiency. The suit is made of nylon tricot and can be used without the air cushion.

Contributes to handicapped

FT. LAUDERDALE, Fla.—Wayne Shumate (center) receiving an award from Buck Dawson of the Swimming Hall of Fame and Donna deVarona. The award was from the President's Council on Physical Fitness for Mr. Shumate's many contributions to the handicapped.

Shumate made the presentation before an audience that included divers in the National AAU Masters Indoor Championships underway at the Pool, and several younger divers training for the Olympic trials under the guidance of U.S. Olympic diving team coach Ron O'Brien.

In turn Shumate was presented with a special award by Dawson and Ms. deVarona: a certificate from President Ford's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, for Shumate's many contributions to the handicapped.

The widely-traveled industrialist (with interests on six continents) responded, "We regard the development of this suit as a privilege, which is why we sell it at our cost and not for profit. The Aqualift opens a new avenue of recreation for the handicapped and we are proud to play this small part in their welfare and enjoyment."

Dr. Tom Songster, athletic director for the Special Olympics, was unable to attend but wired his compliments for the work Blue Grass was doing: "Blue Grass donated regular swimsuits in the Special Olympics pattern for all the competitors in the Invitational Games last year. We hope that this will set an example for other companies to review their product lines to find ways they can also participate in this most worthwhile program."
