MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions — horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle (use other than a black or red pen). Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.

Choosing a summer camp

Kids are out of school and on the rampage—looking for places to go and things to do. And lots of parents are just now starting to think about sending their children to camp. But how and why do you choose one?

Finding a summer camp for your child shouldn't be a hit-or-miss affair, especially if your youngster has never been away from home.

You need to find out what kind of camp is right for your child. Livestock camps are held for an extended period of time, usually at least a week. At day camps, parents bring their children every morning and pick them up at night at the camp or a designated pick-up-and-delivery spot. Costs and age requirement vary.

Camps are great vacations for children to explore their world and meet kids from different backgrounds. They're an especially valuable opportunity for youngsters who have little chance for experiences away from home.

Here are some of the objectives of a good camping program:

—to develop a sense of understanding and appreciation of nature;

—to educate for safe and healthful living;

—to provide training in leadership and decision making;

—to develop social skills;

—to show how to use leisure time constructively;

—to contribute to personality and character development;

—to develop spiritual meanings and values;

—to learn to accept responsibilities;

—to learn how to get along with people;

—to help kids explore careers and improve employability; and

—to achieve feelings of success.

Most of all, kids have fun at a good camp. It will be worth your time and theirs to seek out the right one.

The Kentucky 4-H Camping Program is outstanding in the nation. Forth Central 4-H Camp located here in Nicholas county is one of the finest.

Swimming and boating, archery, hiking, crafts, group singing, folk games, nature and conservation studies, vespers, campfires—all this and more awaits you at 4-H camp.

There'll be new friends, new sports, and outdoor living to enjoy. You'll learn more about citizenship, leadership, and getting along with other people.

Your cabin-mates will be about your age—each cabin room has bunk beds for 12 to 14 campers. An advisor also will stay in each cabin and be on hand to help out with camp activities.

Trained instructors will be on hand at all times. Doing things the safe way is part of 4-H camping. Life guards at the swimming pool and life jackets for all boaters help insure water safety. Qualified teachers will conduct classes on gun safety and supervise rifle target practice.

There'll be three good meals a day from noon Monday through noon Friday—and snacks to keep you going between times.

Parents are welcome at any time. If they plan to eat with you, just let the camp manager know ahead of time. Visitors are charged a small fee for meals.

Call your County Extension Agent at 289-2313 right now to find out about camp, which is July 5-9.

Then, together with your parents or guardian, you can prepare the forms. You can spend five days and four nights at camp. The camp fee covers all meals and lodging.

A Meat, Lards, Vegetable and Tobacco Judging Camp will be held July 9-10. Specific judging skills will be stressed.

Teen Camp is planned for July 31, Aug. 1-2.

Kentucky 4-H Camps are conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Kentucky, College of Agriculture. Coordinating the program at each camp is a camp director. A trained paid staff, 4-H teaching staff, Extension agents, volunteer 4-H leaders, and older 4-H'ers also work with the 4-H'ers at each camp.

Blue Licks swim lessons to begin

Swimming lessons will be offered at Blue Licks State Park this summer.

Anyone interested is asked to be at the park at 11 a.m. Monday, June 14 to sign up. Persons will be assigned classes at this time and dates given.

NEXT WEEK'S HOROSCOPE

By Clov R. Pollan

FOR WEEK BEGINNING MONDAY, JUNE 14, 1976
If your birthday occurs this week . . .
you are a romantic. You believe in faraway ideas and the long ago. The world at a distance appeals to you with the result that you are always on the move.

Aries Mar. 21 - Apr. 19 Pluto
Moon signs indicate success with projects started this week. This is an excellent time to begin programs for improvement and health. Organize a get together with people you are fond of. Cash in on your good reputation and useful connections. Hospital visits on agenda.

Taurus Apr. 20 - May 20 Venus
This is a week to enjoy the company of others and seek out meaningful relationships. People you have had trouble with should be friendly now. Remember special promises and anniversary greetings. You could discover a hidden 'gold mine.' Straighten out snags.

Gemini May 21 - June 20 Mercury
Accent is on mutual gain. You could form a new business relationship or be offered an attractive proposition. Be understanding of the problems of others and make mature concessions. You open a new line of communication with one who will support your efforts.

Cancer June 21 - July 22 Moon
This week presents a changing scene. New faces enter your picture and social activities accelerate. Education and travel will be areas of gain and you should experience different surroundings. Be prepared to make a vital decision. Grasp the hand of a proffered friendship.

Leo July 23 - Aug. 22 Sun
The lunar cycle brings new energy and vitality to all your relationships. Excellent time to get people working on a mutual project. You become more efficient and develop your own style. Adjustments in domestic areas would be desirable. Promises received may not be fully honored.

Virgo Aug. 23 - Sept. 22 Mercury
Your powers of leadership will be strong during this period. Your relations with people at place of work should be more harmonious and your authority will be widely recognized. Try to impress important outside business contacts. Complications may cause money trouble.

Libra Sept. 23 - Oct. 22 Venus
A week of mixed aspects. Unexpected financial events could cause you a bit of concern, but things should turn out in your favor. Tempers could run short, so it will be best not to push things too much. A time to get out and experience new things. Maintain a sense of humor.

Scorpio Oct. 23 - Nov. 21 Mars
A more contented, more tranquil and sociable mood will prevail this week than at any time in the past six months. This is because you find it comparatively easy to win the approval and gain the backing of others. One close to your heart responds warmly. Travel is well aspected.

Sagittarius Nov. 22 - Dec. 21 Jupiter
Luck in gambling and speculation will be much better during this period. You are not going to hit the jackpot and win a fortune, but you can have a lot of fun and show reasonable profit in your activities. Be sure a friend is on the level with you. Current news or mail favorable.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 19 Saturn
If you are prepared to do a certain amount of spade work now there should be a profitable and pleasing outcome during the week. Something happens to remind you of a loved one far away. Experiments with food or drink are to be avoided. Don't count on support of friends.

Aquarius Jan. 20 - Feb. 18 Uranus
This is a time to push ahead with your goals at work and strive to better your position in life. Your ability to learn by teaching and sharing is emphasized. A desire is fulfilled but not as you might have expected. A welcome surprise concerning money is likely. Don't reveal plans.

Pisces Feb. 19 - Mar. 20 Neptune
You can build on a more solid base now. The key is to ride with the tide, to be open minded, receptive. Give attention to finances, leases, taxes, insurance. See people in person. Direct contact is best. Expand knowledge about places afar. Don't neglect duties.

GET YOUR $WORTH

NEW CREDIT RULE

The new Federal Trade Commission rule on installment buying went into effect last May 14 an important day for anyone who has ever purchased anything on credit.

Before May 14 you were pretty helpless when you bought an item that turned out to be faulty or shoddy or inoperative. You complained to the retailer, threatened to stop making your installment payments, unless he repaired or replaced the faulty merchandise.

You perhaps found out that the retailer, if he wished, could laugh at you — because he had sold your installment contract to a bank or finance company. But the finance company holding your contract was not responsible for the merchandise.

You were stuck; if you threatened to stop making your payments, the "holder in due course," as the bank or finance company is called, could legally garnishee your wages or repossess the goods.

The new FTC rule now makes the holder of an installment contract liable for faulty merchandise, for deception or misconduct on the part of the retailer. You don't have to keep making payments, and you can sue the holder of the contract to get back the money you have paid.

You must have a valid claim, of course, and be able to prove that you've been gipped or deceived.

The rule doesn't apply to credit card purchases, and it applies only if you obtain the installment loan from a lender arranged by the retailer.

Senator
Dee Huddleston
REPORTS TO THE PEOPLE OF KENTUCKY

INCREASE ESTATE TAX EXEMPTION

The Senate Finance Committee is working on a major tax reform bill that hopefully will include a reform of the federal estate tax law. Unfortunately, the tax bill passed by the House of Representatives did not include an estate tax reform provision.

But I am confident that Congress will pass reform legislation, either in the tax bill or in separate legislation.

When Congress passed the original $60,000 estate tax exemption in 1942 it was adequate. But as time passed, and inflation took its toll, the exemption became outdated.

As a result, many family farms cannot be passed on within the family because of oppressive inheritance taxes.

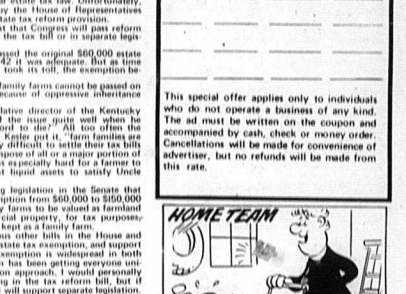
F.W. Kesler, legislative director of the Kentucky Farm Bureau, posed the issue quite well when he asked: "Can you afford to die?" All too often the answer is no. As Mr. Kesler put it, "farm families are finding it particularly difficult to settle their tax bills without being forced to dispose of all or a major portion of their farmland as it is especially hard for a farmer to accumulate sufficient liquid assets to satisfy Uncle Sam's tax bill."

I am cosponsoring legislation in the Senate that would raise the exemption from $60,000 to $150,000 and also allow family farms to be valued as farmland rather than commercial property, for tax purposes, so long as the land is kept as a family farm.

There are numerous other bills in the House and Senate to raise the estate tax exemption, and support for increasing the exemption is widespread in both houses. The problem has been getting everyone united behind a common approach. I would personally like to see something in the tax reform bill, but if that does not occur I will support separate legislation.

I am now working with the Interior Department to get some funds for the University of Kentucky to further document the correlation between massive blackbird roosts in Kentucky and increased incidence of the lung disease histoplasmosis.

Although I have no doubt about the relationship, I believe we must have strong evidence to take into court next winter if the Animal Rights Society should again challenge our right to use fenglol to control the bird populations.



CAMPING ALL YEAR ROUND
BY BOB NESOFF

BICENTENNIAL YEAR BOOM CAMPING YEAR

Bicentennial 1976 will be a big camping year.

To the north, Canada will lure the U.S. camper with the excitement of the summer Olympics. More campers are expected there this year than the record numbers who trekked north for Expo 67.

At home the Bicentennial celebrations around the country will draw caravans of campers, motor homes, trailers and almost anyone with a tent or sleeping bag in numbers that are both staggering and frightening.

Although private and public campground facilities in the United States are adequate for normal seasons, many have shown signs of bursting at the seams. The problem is expected to reach critical proportions in the eastern seaboard and particularly in the original 13 states where most of the Bicentennial events originally took place.

Special events planned for the celebration will draw unheard of crowds to such areas as Washington, D.C., Williamsburg and Jamestown, Va., and surrounding locations.

However, don't let all of this frighten you away. There will be some problems and inconvenience, but with advance planning, they can be minimized or eliminated.

In cooperation with the United States Department of Interior, Director Russell Wilcox of Kampgrounds of America, Washington, D.C. South, has formed a camper's information and reservation service called BICAMP to assist those visiting the capital.

BICAMP will provide campers with a 10-page camper information guide book to the region and free advice on campsite reservations. I personally recommend that campers DO NOT go into the Washington D.C. area on speculation. If you don't have a site reserved, the probability is that you will not find one on arrival.

The BICAMP guidebook will assist campers in planning a Washington visit and lists tips and other information about what is going on for the Bicentennial.

Wilcox told me, and I agree, that campers should not attempt a sightsee the capital in an RV. Traffic is heavy and close in parking be oversize vehicles is nearly impossible.

Arrangements are being made for mass transportation for campers, on the various campsites into the capital complex.

For information on available facilities, write BICAMP, Occoquan, Va. 22125. A toll-free number, 800-241-8444, operator 140 is available. In Georgia the number is 800-282-1333.

New Horizons
BY JANE FORREST

Dear Jane: Please warn your older readers who live alone and have few or no visitors not to be gullible to strangers who call on the telephone. I work for a telephone answering company, and such lonely people pour out their troubles to me when I call. I've warned those I talk with that this is dangerous but I worry about the many I cannot warn.

A. Thank you for writing. No person who lives alone and has few visitors should give out this information to any person who is not well known to him or her. Admittedly, it is a great temptation to talk about a problem with a sympathetic listener, but as this woman points out you must not allow yourself to trust someone you know nothing about.

I remember very well when I was a widow and moved to a new city I called to get a phone. In discussing how I should list myself in the telephone book, I requested that I be listed as Jane Forrest. The telephone company representative advised me to find an alternate listing which would not reveal my sex and single status. She told me that I would avoid the possibility of receiving unwanted, possibly obscene, calls if I used a listing which was neutral. I ended up listed as J.J. Forrest, which my relatives and friends knew was my phone, but which no stranger could identify as to sex or marital status.

Dear Debbie
Letters to DEBORAH WIRTH

DEAR DEBBIE:

My husband recently took a new partner into his business. We have become friendly with him and his wife. This man and I have developed an unusual rapport. To put it bluntly, we are insulted because it cost her five dollars. How can I get her to stop playing this game?

IRMA

DEAR IRMA:

It takes two to play her game, so why don't you be the first to stop? The next time she insists you guess the price, be equally firm and tell her you can't. Then change the subject fast.

DEAR DEBBIE:

Please say something about grandparents who spoil their grandchildren rotten. We are trying to bring up our 5-year-old daughter with a fair amount of discipline. Grandma lives in the same town so we see her often. My daughter loves to go there because she can do pretty much as she wants. My husband sees nothing wrong with this. It's his mother, but when I tell my daughter she can't have something she always runs to Grandma because Grandma would give in to her. My mother-in-law reads your column, so please write something that will straighten her out once and for all.

DEAR HAD:

Sorry, but you won't get much help from me. Many experts agree the relationship between children and grandparents is very special and important, precisely because of the extra permissiveness the children don't experience at home. And I agree.
