blown from the top of the hill to the road area. Some other damage in the county is: Sheriff Reese Scoot's three barns were damaged on his farm. One of these barns was moved about three feet. He said Monday that in addition to the barns, 24 irrigation pipes were uprooted and blown into another field.

—TV towers, belonging to Don Hughes and Charles Judge on Cliffway Drive, were cut into two pieces each. —Also on Cliffway, Roger Womack's tree was cut off at ground level, and Gerald Watkins' red barn was blown over a fence onto the Mathers farm.

—Dugene Letcher lost a barn at Cassidy Creek.

—Harold Mitchell's chimney and antenna were blown off at 44 Locust St. —Mrs. William Harper's lower on Archdeacon Ave. blew across James Cannon's yard onto a truck parked on North St.

—A barn was destroyed on the Livingood farm on the Gallows Hill Road.

We were at the Little League Basketball Tournament at the High School when the storm or tornado struck. The lights dimmed and then went out temporarily as the high winds bashed against the huge windows on one side of the gym. For a moment pandemonium broke loose as it seemed the windows were going to shatter.

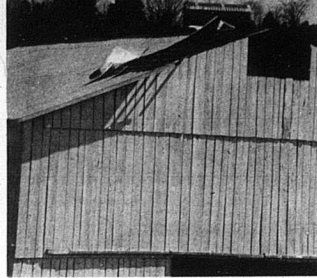

The entire section where we were seated evacuated quickly. We were headed for the basement—but as the game was continued (most of the spectators were not aware of any danger), we moved to the other side of the gym and watched the rest of the overtime game. We felt safer away from the windows.

As we returned home, after taking some other children home, we heard the fire sirens, the police sirens, and we noticed how "weird" the city can be without street lights or lights.

Although our lights were not out at home, many others were along the way. We were very thankful to be home, and to learn later that nobody was injured during this short, but expensive storm or small tornado.
