Greg Haney wins Junior golf tourney

Greg Haney won the Carrico Junior Club Golf Championship tournament held last Wednesday, July 27. Runner-up in the 18 hole tourney was Sam Dudley with Mark Taylor and Steve Anderson tying for third place.

Forty teams have entered the member-guest tournament which is to be played this weekend. Hal Washington, Golf Pro is expecting another five to 10 teams to register this week. A dinner-dance is set for Saturday evening as part of the two-day tournament. A country ham breakfast will be served Sunday from 7 a.m. to 9 a.m. to tournament participants.

Leaf miners are chewing on locusts

FRANKFORT—If you've been concerned because a number of trees in your area have been turning brown and seem to be dying, you can relax.

State forestry officials say that the damage being done to black locust trees by an insect known as the locust leaf miner is mostly aesthetic and happens almost every summer in Kentucky, as well as in most eastern states.

"Since attacks by the locust leaf miner seldom cause tree mortality, no controls are undertaken in forest conditions," said Jarrett Grim, forestry director in the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection. He added, however, that homeowners might want to control the insects on shade or ornamental trees.

The scientific name of the insect which makes the black locust trees turn brown and defoliate is Xenochalepus dorsalis. The adult, an orange and black beetle about one-fourth inch in length, spends the winter in bark crevices or under debris on the ground. It emerges in the spring to feed on the new leaves.

The feeding damage is negligible, but the adults also deposit eggs on the lower surfaces of the black locust leaves. When the larvae hatch from the eggs, the tiny grubs bore into the leaf and feed between the upper and lower leaf surfaces. In this way, they actually create a mine, from which they get their name.

Grim said that anyone wishing more information on controlling the insect should write to the Division of Forestry, Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, Teton Trail, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Rev. and Mrs. Sheppard

Sheppards will perform

Rev. and Mrs. Charles Sheppard of Wilmore will present a program of sacred music at the Saltwell United Methodist Church on Sunday, Aug. 7 at 7:30 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard are both graduates of Asbury College, Wilmore, where they reside. Mr. Sheppard studied at the American Conservatory of Music, Chicago and taught on the music faculty of Chicago Evangelistic Institute, now Vennard College.

Mrs. Sheppard attended the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and headed the music department of Cleveland Bible College, now Malone College, Canton, Ohio. The Sheppards have served as ministers of music in churches in several states.

The Sheppards have traveled widely in sacred concerts, song evangelism and mission tours in 36 states, five Canadian provinces, and 23 foreign countries. Singing in Holland, they were presented to the late Dutch Queen, Princess Wilhelmina.

Singing highlights of the ministry of the Sheppards have been Methodist Conferences in Austria, Baptist Festa in Switzerland, singing in the state churches of Norway, city-wide meetings in Beirut, Lebanon, 17 missions to the Middle East and Israel and numerous missions to Europe.

The pastor, Rev. Roy C. Hunt, invites members and friends of the church and community to attend this service in the ministry of sacred music.

Fluoride program termed successful

The Fluoride Mouthrinse Program was termed a success in Nicholas county for the 1976-77 school year, Health Department co-ordinator for the program, Janice Huy, stated that 771 students participated, reaching approximately 90% of the elementary school children.

This preventative dental program has been proven to reduce cavities in children by 30 to 40 percent.

If your child is not enrolled in the Fluoride Mouthrinse Program and you wish him to participate, permission slips will be distributed in the school this fall.

KEEPING CHILD IN BED
Dear Dr. Esse: When a child gets sick (I have five of them) my greatest problem is keeping him or her in bed. I've heard that the child must have complete rest when fever is present.

Just how important is bed rest when a child has a fever? Suppose it holds on for a week or more? How can one possibly keep a child quiet all that time?

Our doctor is strict about treating fever by rest. I have a neighbor whose doctor says, "Let the child play quietly out of bed when he or she gets restless." I'm interested in your opinion.—Mrs. G.

COMMENT: Many mothers like yourself ask how to keep sick, restless children in bed. How to keep them quiet and contented day after day? Well, if you can't lick 'em, join 'em. Let them up for a while.

Lately there seems to be sufficient evidence to raise doubts; whether or not prolonged bed rest is really essential in all illnesses.

According to a recent report by Dr. R.S.I. of England, "Short bed rest offers few advantages over early ambulation in treatment of most childhood diseases: Unnecessary confinement to bed is boring, makes sleep at night more difficult, and isolates the child. In fact, some children exert less energy when up than when in bed. And bed rest does not appear to shorten duration of fever or illness in respiratory infections. Each child deserves special management."

Would You Believe...

The most long-lived animal is the giant tortoise of the Galapagos Islands. Specimens have been estimated to be as old as 190 years.

Parson Jones

I see by the papers that the Pope is having trouble with some of his flock. Some of the priests are leading a rebellion to go back to using Latin in the Mass. Some time ago the Pope decreed that using Latin, as they had for years, was a no-no.

The news that the Mass would from hence forth be in the language of the people was greeted with shouts of horray by them that felt the move was long overdue. On the other side of the pew, the decree was received with the gnashing of teeth. They claimed "if Latin was good enough for their forefathers it was good enough for them."

Catholics ain't the only ones caught up in the "up-dating" controversy. Almost every religious group in the world is having the same problem. In an age of rapid-fire change, the old familiar words and sounds brought comfort—like an old comfortable easy-chair.

It seems to this humble Parson that both sides have a lot of soul-searching to do. Both sides seem more interested in how the worship sounds than they are in what it says and what it means. Sister Tremble, a member of my flock, doesn't care what I say in the worship service, as long as my voice quivers like a sad violin cry. People are more interested in vibrations than vocabulary.

"As for me and my house," like the Bible says, I'm glad Jesus didn't try teaching the disciples in French. I have an idea that if the Lord came back and spoke to me, it would be in English. Sometimes I wonder what language we'll use to worship God in Heaven. (Of course we know that God speaks English!)

That's all from here.

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions—horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle. Then cross off the word in the list. Circling is all done—a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big word-text. When letters of all the listed words are circled, you'll have the exact number of letters in the text. Dizzy? We'll tell you: MAGICWORD.
