Consumer Comments

The Christmas season is a time for giving to others. Charitable organizations will be making their appeals for funds during this upcoming holiday season, and will hope that you will be filled with the Christmas Spirit and donate to their worthy causes. Last year alone, over $2 billion was given to charities in the United States.

However, this fund-raising season can also bring imposters. These persons collect money for organizations that do not exist, or are claiming to be a member of a local organization when they really are not a member. Therefore, consumers should be cautious before making contributions to charitable organizations this holiday season.

If a solicitor comes to your door collecting money for a local organization, ask the person for identification and the name of the group and the sponsor who has the fund-raising project. Then call that organization, your local community service organization or the nearest Better Business Bureau to check out the charity's reputation before you make a donation. You can mail a contribution directly to the charity if you decide you want to participate. Should you discover that the solicitor is an imposter or is collecting money without the organization's permission, then contact your local police department and report the imposter.

A great deal of fund-raising from out-of-state organizations takes place through the mail. If you receive literature from a charity asking for money, examine the materials closely to see how your donation will be spent. Check out the reputation of these organizations by writing the National Information Bureau, a nonprofit organization that has established ratings for fund-raising organizations based upon examinations of their solicitation practices, management of funds, and yearly audits. The National Information Bureau can provide you with a booklet entitled "Who Giving Guide" that will detail their evaluations of three hundred (300) charities. Request the book by writing 419 Park Avenue North, New York, New York 10018.

The Phalarisic Advisory Service of the Council of Better Business Bureaus also keeps records on over eight thousand (8,000) charitable organizations. If you write their headquarters at 1150 17th Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, they will provide you a free charge with up to three reports on specific charities.

If you have a question concerning a charitable organization and need assistance in locating information about the fund-raising group, contact the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. Our office has found it can most effectively deal with written complaints and encourage you to write one.

Railroad shutdowns to be discussed at series of public meetings Dec. 6-15

FRANKFORT — Kentucky's railroad, especially local rail lines now facing possible shutdowns, will be discussed at a series of public meetings scheduled to begin at Hickman, Dec. 6, according to state Department of Transportation Secretary Calvin G. Grayson.

"The five meetings have been scheduled across the state to solicit public participation early in the state rail planning process," Mr. Grayson said. He said the public meetings are part of a study by KYTOOT to develop a state rail plan to be submitted to the Federal Railroad Administration.

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press." — 1st Amendment, U. S. Constitution

"What more effective alternatives to rail service might exist."

"In this planning process," said Mr. Grayson, "we will be looking for the best possible rail KYTOOT can play in the future, with the state's railroads."

Mr. Grayson said long range efforts in the rail plan will include "looking at the prospects for traffic growth in the coal, grain, and manufacturing areas, and the railroad industry's ability to respond to that growth."

The first phase of the rail plan is expected to be complete within eight months, according to KYTOOT officials said.
