

Kentucky reflections

18th year of democracy is still alive and kicking. One can only speculate what would have been the outcome had President Ford had access to such funds as Richard Nixon had in his race against George McGovern. Would those additional millions have changed the outcome in those three crucial states?

Thanks

To our Farm Customers and those who purchased fertilizer from us last year, we want to thank each of you very much. We aim to give you the best of service and try to sell you a good product.

We hope you have had a good crop and we hope you have a good New Year.

Once again we are selling fertilizer and we hope you will come in and see us before you buy. We can save you money and can deliver it right to your barn. Be sure and call us at 289-5306 or 289-5970.

Thanks again.

BEGINS WED., JAN. 12

James E. Gray, presently secretary of public protection and regulation, will soon become secretary of the cabinet and says he will be guided by "fiscal and political responsibility." Gov. Julian Carrall recently named Gray to replace James W. White who has resigned.

In Kentucky an attorney by an interregional committee to introduce public funding of the gubernatorial race was drafted. The succeeding Legislature was not interested.

In Maryland, the House Speaker voiced a common objection that he did not feel his constituents wanted their taxes used in political campaigns. Other incumbents feared public financing would encourage competition, and some cited limits on campaign contributions as a violation of the Federal Constitution.

The U.S. Supreme Court has upheld the requirement of disclosure of political contributions. The Court has also upheld limits on total spending by those candidates who accepted public funding. It struck down other limits, reasoning that in this age of mass communication an expenditure for speech is the same as that for political activity. The First Amendment rights are constitutionally protected by limitations for direct spending by a candidate on his own behalf, and by individuals or groups independent of candidates but to promote his nomination or election, was so clearly related to speech itself as to be entitled to protection.

The course of American elections can be greatly affected by their development in the states. Justice Brandeis once observed that the states are "laboratories of reform," pointing out that mistakes made in a few may not significantly harm the entire nation, but can serve as models for other states and for federal law.

After a certain level of expenditure, additional campaigning spending is unproductive. Because of this, one perceptive commentator maintains that the important element is that serious candidates be afforded amounts sufficient to mount a campaign; that a floor rather than a ceiling for candidates in the real need of the electorate is to be given a choice.

The highly visible conspicuous candidates have attracted the contributors, and even McGovern and Goldwater attracted substantial contributions. This suggests that the expenditure of public financing on candidates at the grass roots where candidates have little choice except to go to special interest groups is not so important.

No significant far reaching change can be brought about at this time. We proceed by trial and error—falling, trying again, and learning finally what we set out to learn.

If we know the answer, the question would not be worth asking.

"Newspapers and newspaper readers need to recall this warning by Alexander Hamilton 200 years ago. 'Liberty of the press must altogether depend on public opinion and the general spirit of the people and of the government.'"

FUEL ADJUSTMENT CHANGE GRANTED BY FRANKFORT—Kentucky Utilities Co. has been authorized to change the basis for its fuel adjustment charge computation from the present three-month-recent-month system to the single-month-recent-month method by the State Public Service Commission.

The new basis for computation, effective Jan. 1, is designed to reduce the time lag in recovery, either by the company or its customers, due to variations in the costs of coal and related items.

In its Dec. 22 order, the commission also authorized the Lexington-based firm to impose a surcharge of $1,000 per KW on its customers in order to recover losses resulting from the change to the new system of computation.

The commission estimated that Kentucky Utilities will lose $4,779,064 by virtue of the change.

Would you borrow money from this man?

You would if you borrowed from the Federal Land Bank because he's one of our member-voters. You see, despite our name, the Federal Land Bank is not funded by the federal government. Each Land Bank Association is farmer-owned and operated and has been for generations.

Our funds come from the sale of each Association to the directors of each Association as elected directors by the farmers who borrow, and consequently own the Association. So, you need long-term farm credit. You need your own local "Federal" Land Bank Association.
