MOPED STUDENT—Kentucky State Police Lt. Ernest Bivens [left] questions Assistant Attorney General Mark Armstrong about the operation of a motorized bicycle, or "moped." Armstrong testified before an interim joint subcommittee of the Kentucky General Assembly in favor of legislation legalizing the sale of mopeds in Kentucky. Lt. Bivens also appeared before the subcommittee and told the legislators that any bill should require registration of the motorized bikes, licensing of their operators and a short course in traffic laws. According to Gary Williams, a moped distributor in Evansville, Ind., the vehicle is safer and much quieter than motorcycles, can come to a stop faster than 30-speed bicycles, go 156 miles on a gallon of gasoline and is ideal for running errands in town. "This is just a short-haul machine; it's not made for highway use," Williams said. "It's just made for utility purposes."

Pres. Singletary re-elected vice-chairman SREB

ATLANTA—University of Kentucky president Otis A. Singletary is the 1977-78 vice-chairman of the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB)—the nation's first interstate compact for the advancement of higher education. President Singletary was re-elected to the post at the 70-member Board's annual meeting held June 22-24 in Houston, Texas.

Chigger now spits instead of biting and stinging...Huh?

A chigger doesn't bite you, he doesn't sting you, he doesn't hibernate in your skin. Honest.

Instead, he spits up a smidgen of foreign-protein enzyme and waits for it to dissolve a speck of skin. Then he sucks up the dissolved tissue and logs back into the bushes to digest his meal.

That, according to a UK Extension entomologist with the UK College of Agriculture, is how chiggers operate.

Wes Gregory explains that the terrible itching comes from your body's reaction to that foreign protein. All various types of home and commercial remedies can hope to do is give you some temporary relief until the skin heals. That nail polish you dab over the spot doesn't suffocate the chigger, because he's not there. It just keeps air from hitting the irritated skin and setting off the itching. Then again, the nail polish itself might further traumatize that sensitive area.

And so, says Gregory, the best defense is prevention. Treat yourself with a good insect repellent before you go into the back country or berry patch.

Spray your clothing around the edges and wherever it is tight against the body—bra straps, around waist and leg openings, sleeves, etc. Spray insect repellent around the tops of shoes and socks, too. If you go bare-armed or bare-legged (which just isn't a good idea), spray them well, especially behind elbows and knees.

How big is a chigger? According to Gregory, he's not. This reddish colored six-legged mite, a larvae of the family Trombidiidae, is so small he's practically out of sight. If you have 20-20 vision and look very closely in the right place, you might possibly see him. Otherwise, you'll need a magnifying glass, or a microscope if you want to count all his legs.

Parson Jones

I reckon you missed the announcement that my new Church Hum-nal has just been released. This new Hum-nal of mine has been in the works for sometime, but I've finally got it off the ground.

I first got the idea when I noticed I couldn't see the words or notes in the hymnal any more. I got to thinking how many more such people there were, who either couldn't see or didn't like the words they were seeing. But as I put my hand to the task, I realized that this whole project was a sight more important than I thought. I'll show you what I mean.

Now this new Hum-nal is a hard bound book with plain empty pages. They don't even have numbers. With the Hum-nal, people can hum along any tune they want to. They can hum in any language—English, French, German, Spanish, or what have you ton the principal of "different strokes for different folks"). Not only that, but all denominations can use the same book without getting into a fight. Getting choir members will no longer be a chore, because humming doesn't require a great deal of talent, and the vain ones can leave their glasses at home, and the young ones can still wear their dark glasses. This Hum-nal will last for all time—it will never need to be up-dated.

I had a little trouble with the color of the cover, on account of it could be divisive. So, I drained some fluid from these little lizzards that change colors, depending on what they're crawling on, and made a paint out of it. And now with the lizzard extract of chromosomes and corpuscles in the paint, the Hum-nal changes color to suit the beholder.

New Horizons

By JANE FORREST

Dear Jane: My husband is planning to retire soon. Ahead of us there seems to be a vast unknown sea and I think we should try plotting a course together. Don't you agree? -- Mrs. J.

Dear Mrs. J.: Yes I do. Husbands and wives approaching retirement should work out a program together. While men may be retiring from the routine schedule of work, women usually find their schedule of cooking, housecleaning, shopping, etc., remains pretty much the same.

During the years when a husband works, his wife sees him only a few hours a day, except on weekends and during vacations. After retirement the husband may be around the house a good deal of time. This new experience may require some adjustment. Changes like these in one's life pattern should be considered and planned for ahead of retirement.

MAGIC WORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions — horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle then strike it off list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGIC WORD.
