

How long will there be a park?

The frustrating situation of the man who sees his juveniles leaving the premises of the Nicholas County Recreation Park recently, but later finding a facility against him again, has been brought to our attention. It is difficult enough to discover the

Energy and taxes

We concur with the general objectives of the national energy program outlined by the President. It agrees with the emphasis on tough conservation measures and the establishment of strategic reserves. We consider the development of alternative energy sources to be equally important. However, most of the major waste of energy is in the residential program are centered in the proposals which attempt to meet energy goals through price provisions which penalize consumers and workers and reward business.

The major tax proposals—the gas guzzler tax, the standby gasoline tax and the oil equalization tax—boil down to an attempt to ration and conserve energy through increasing its price. For the poor, the effect can be serious hardship and, for many middle-income Americans, heavy burdens. Living standards would occur. But for the wealthy, higher energy costs would mean nothing.

Inflicting the price of energy to induce conservation is not a new idea. On October 1973 embargo and the market quota massive increase in energy costs and price controls substantially to a worldwide recession, generated mass unemployment, skyrocketing inflation, and heightened international tensions. We agree with you and can support many of the proposals contained in the President's plan, including some of the tax measures, we urge the committee to reject those proposals which would unduly penalize the hardworking energy conservation and development on low and middle-income consumers, workers and taxpayers. Now I know. Why carpenter bees drill their holes for nests under the porch railing in the I-frame every season. It's not for privacy, it's because the surface isn't painted. At least the painted surface tends to deter the bees according to Chris Christensen, UIC extension entomologist. Additionally he recommends spraying entrance holes with either 2% carbaryl solution or a 0.5% dichlorvos aerosol product.

Another way to look at it. Each well writing in the United County Advocate of the other day says: We were offering our sympathy to the defeated candidate of the other day when he shrugged his shoulders, smiled, thanked, and added: "I look at it this way—just think of all the people I made happy by not being elected."

To the Carlisle Mercury: Thanks for publishing the letter of my good faithful friend and former pupil, Kathleen McClanahan of Xenia, Ohio concerning the oil equalization tax. The Mercury certainly spread the news from coast to coast.

I have visited several libraries in this county and I've never known one that allows anyone to check out a magazine and to library has a preferred, specially privileged patron. This seems to be undemocratic, illegal and a violation of our constitutional rights to equality of opportunity.

Committee wants Beverly Hills records

FRANKFORT—The Interim Joint Health and Welfare Legislative committee last week urged a subpoena of all records pertaining to fire prevention provisions at the Beverly Hills night club which burned May 28, killing 61. The subcommittee, after hearing testimony from state Sen. Tom Eastery (D-Frankfort), specifically called upon law enforcement agencies, especially in Franklin county, to subpoena the records.

Eastery indicated he had discussed his feelings about exits at the club with state Fire Marshal Warren Southworth. Eastery said he thought that Southworth had been "overruled" in his attempt to improve the nightclub's safety.

Following his testimony, Eastery asked the health and welfare body to "obtain all correspondence between the fire marshal's office and the Beverly Hills on this matter. Blueprints of the facility should also be made available to the committee," he said.

Sen. Clyde Middleton (R-Covington) moved to "express to law enforcement agencies that the records should be subpoenaed."

Rep. Larry Hopkins (D-Lexington) expressed his regret with regard to the fire catastrophe which claimed seven lives from his home district. Hopkins asked for a full investigation by appropriate agencies to report their findings to the Health and Welfare Committee.

Asked about the committee's jurisdiction in the matter, committee chairman Rep. Jerry Kiser (D-Louisville) said the body is specifically responsible to address fire prevention and fire protection.

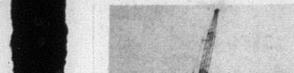

Rep. Mitchell B. Debanah (D-Mayfield) introduced a resolution, which passed, thanking all agencies and individuals who contributed to rescue and recovery efforts at the Beverly Hills club.

The Brown School in Texas started at $120 per month and goes to $100 for the emotionally disturbed. Kentucky's public school system has long run to contract with experienced operators of private schools. These operators probably would be willing to contract new facilities if they could get a guaranteed long-term contract with the state. Private enterprise can create more efficiently and cheaper than the state can operate the facilities.

FRANKFORT—Nearly one-half million dollars in road and bridge improvements were announced here this week for an area including 11 counties in the Bluegrass Region of Kentucky. The projects were part of a $7 million package of contract awards which stemmed from a bid-letting held in Frankfort on May 19 by the state's Bureau of Public Works.

According to State Transportation Secretary Calvin W. Grayson, the largest contract awarded in the Bluegrass area went to Danville Construction Co., Inc. of Danville for the backlogging of seven roads in Garrard county. The contract will cost $108,301.

In Nicholas county, decking repairs are scheduled for a bridge over the Licking River on Carlisle-Flemingburg Road (KY 31), 6.8 miles from the city limits of Carlisle. The cost of this project is $47,300.
