The Price of Plenty
by Mike Phillips

Just a few months ago, every news cast on every station be it tv, radio, or newspaper was filled with the farmer's strike.

Questions raised by the general public ranged from wall stores and supermarkets soon run out of food to well, of course, what affect will the strike have on the cost of food I have to purchase for my family.

On the other side of the coin, the farmers were demanding a higher price for these products they placed on the market for sale. We heard the term "parity" used over and over. 100% parity for our goods or 80% parity and I found that these people are demanding equality, likeness, equivalence in currency. Someone came up with a formula that when applied would bring the buying power of the farmer up to a level enjoyed in 1914. I have always heard that times were hard back in the old days. But it would appear from the standpoint of the farmer that his dollar just won't buy what it used to for the same amount of goods sold.

Only time will tell as to the outcome of this strike. Whether to plant or not to plant is the question he and he alone has to answer. This will not be an easy task to find a simple answer to. He has to consider himself, his family, and whether or not he will be able to survive if he reduces his crop 25%-50% and soon. If he can't meet last year's obligations would think that he will be forced to plant that crop whether he wants to or not. Lending institutions are fine things until we get behind, then we turn this friend into a foe.

For the past several years excluding last year, the grain farmer was doing quite well. Grain was bringing a good price so he decides he will expand. He will buy a bigger tractor to plant more. Come fall he decides that the old combine has had several seasons on it, so he thinks he will just go get a larger one so he can get the crop in before bad weather sets in. The next spring with all this big equipment, he decides he could handle more so he buys more land and this will call for more drying and storage facilities until suddenly he has spent himself out. The only alternative is to have more out of his crop.

When this happens, the consumer decides to get in on the act because they comprise about 96% of population compared to only 4% population now living on the farm.

So the cry goes out — our food bill is too high! Have you ever stopped to consider what you are buying when you go to get the groceries? Very few products are readily identifiable on the grocer's shelves as the farmer grew and sold it.

Processing has taken place on nearly every item we buy, whether it be in packaging, condensing, or having a product you either just add water to or pop it in the oven five minutes and serve in its own convenient form. These are the things we are buying. That metal can costs money to produce, that pretty label with its carefully selected colors and word arrangement costs money to develop and have printed, and advertisement for product identification costs money. Whether its the jolly green giant or its the "choosy mother's spread", it costs money for these extras and the people that pay the bills for all these things are you and I, my friend.

As long as we continue to demand easy to prepare instant products, the price has only one way to go and that is up.

Don't get me wrong, I am not knocking these products because I enjoy the convenience as much as the next fellow; but I feel the key is understanding between consumers and farmers.

We must understand what makes up the cost of the goods we produce. It is easy to overlook these things and point directly to the farmer.

Let's stop for a moment and look at what price the farmer gets for just four items he takes to the market for sale. Let's look at wheat, corn, beef, and hogs. For comparison, I took prices he was receiving in January this year compared to what the same products brought four short years ago. In January, wheat was bringing $2 compared to $4.45 in 1974. Corn was $2.09 per bushel compared to $2.68 in 1974. Beef $34.10 cwt. compared to $51.70 cwt. Hogs $41.90 cwt. compared to $56.30 cwt. For the next half year period. Most farmers have a pickup truck. The price on a basic pickup has gone from $3,300 in 1974 to $5,650 in January of 1978. A 95 hp. tractor has gone from $10,800 dollars to $18,800 and a ton of Anhydrous, though not used around here locally, has gone from $93 a ton to $180 a ton.

You can readily see the plight of the farmer. As consumers of agricultural products, we get very disturbed to hear that last month's food index went up .6 per cent yet the additional cost isn't finding its way to the farmer's pocketbook.

We have heard the phrase "let's get back to the basics of life". If we hope to reduce the price tag, we are going to have to look somewhere else other than the farmer. Very few of today's store operators would try to conduct business in the manner we have placed on today's modern farmer. We have tried to make a magician out of him and he is finding it difficult to continue to find new tricks to stay in business.

Understanding and communication are the keys to what things we can do to solve the situation that now exist. If no other point comes through and if I have caused a few to stop and consider these things, it is a beginning. We must not stop, but continue to carry the message to the masses.

This is The Price of Plenty.

Her creed was, "I am for God and the poor." She was the daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne and spent her early life in cultural salons with artists and writers. In, 1896, however, at the age of 44, this woman went to the slums of New York to minister to poor and terminally ill cancer victims. She joined the Dominican order and came known as Mother Alphonsa, an angel of peace and comfort. Who was that lady? Rose Hawthorne Lathrop.

Fashion 'N Fabrics

By FANNIE GLEESON

TIERS WITHOUT TEARS

This spring and summer, enjoy the lovely billowy effect of the tiered skirt illustrated.

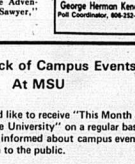
Machine gathers are easy. Set stitch length at eight stitcher per inch. Wind buttonhole twist on bobbin. Slightly loosen tension on needle. Buttonhole twist won't break, when held taut, and you can push fabric along this heavier thread more smoothly and evenly.

Divide fabric section to be gathered into one-eighth areas. Mark with a few stitches of bright-color thread. Mark similar divisions on adjoining section. Stitch each one-eighth length on the seamline and again one-quarter inch away in the seam allowance.

After stitching, wind thread ends at end of each division around a long pin in a figure eight. Pin together sections to be joined, matching markings. Holding the two bobbin threads together in one hand, gently push fabric into gathers. Machine baste.

Next, flatten gathers that are in the seam allowance. Press the seam allowance with the long side of the iron. Use a slightly damp press cloth and don't press beyond the seamline.

Adjust machine to regulation length stitch and place fabric under the needle with the gathered side uppermost. Stitch just a hair's breadth beyond gathering stitches. Gathering stitches won't show and you won't have to rip them out.



As you stitch, use a large needle to push away any tiny folds that may form under the presser foot so that you have a perfectly smooth line of gathers.

Back to the ironing board, where you press seams "as sewed." That means pressing the seam allowances together. This is a practice you should adopt at all times, as it blends the machine stitches with the fabric yarns and makes for a smoother seam.

After this step, press seam allowance up toward tier above. Turn fabric to the right side and press the ungathered side of the seam. Use the flat side of the iron. Place paper between the tier and the seam allowances below to prevent ridges showing.

To press the gathered section, gently guide the point of the iron into the gathers, while you hold the gathers apart with the index finger and thumb of the left hand.

HEMMING HINT -- If you plan to finish your sewing with a rolled hem, put a row of machine stitching near the edge of the fabric to prevent stretching.

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions -- horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle then strike it off list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the seven number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.

BATTER UP! Sol.: 11 letters

YOU AND YOUR HEALTH

By Peter J. Essig, M.D.

ALLERGIC TO COLD

Dear Dr. Esse: I had never heard of allergy to cold until two years ago. I had developed a red rash with itching whenever I walked or exercised in temperatures that were low. This restricted my outdoor activities considerably in cold weather, as my husband and I had moved to the country two years ago.

A cryoglobulin test showed a positive reaction. But my doctor says little is known to counteract it. Do you have any encouraging information? --Mrs. M.

COMMENT: Cold allergy is more common than many realize. I know of nothing to help except trying to fortify oneself against the cold with warm clothes.

Dear Dr. Esse: I am 42. I am a mother of four children. For about 13 years I have been taking one grain of thyroid extract for a "lazy" thyroid condition. I've had tumors removed from my uterus and now I have arthritis. Can thyroid tablets cause tumors or arthritis?-- Mrs. H.

COMMENT: I doubt it.

Dear Dr. Esse: I am 68 years old and my blood pressure is 130 over 88. I am not overweight, very active, work full time and keep house.

Have I anything to be concerned about? I think the lower part of my blood pressure is too high. -- Mrs. W.

COMMENT: I believe that your own doctor will concur -- be thankful for a reading many at your age would like to have. A diastolic (lower) blood pressure reading under 90 is within the normal range.
