Sixth graders present Christmas Operetta

By Harry W. Spickler

Under the direction of Music Teacher Annabelle Burden, the entire sixth grade of the Nicholas County Elementary School presented a Christmas Operetta entitled "The Christmas Jazz". All sixth graders participated in the production. Most of the students were in the chorus or had solo or acting parts. Those who were not involved in the musical aspects were busy with costumes, scenery, lighting and other aspects of the production. Scenery was designed and completed by students under the direction of Art Teacher, Terry Moss.

"The Christmas Jazz" is a unique presentation of the Christmas story written and sung from the viewpoint of the animals in the stable and the donkey who carried Mary to the manger in Bethlehem where Jesus Christ was born.

The production was given twice to the student body of the elementary school, grades 1-4 and 5-8, and then was taken to the Johnson-Mathers Nursing Home, where it was presented to the staff and guests by the entire sixth grade.

Other teachers who worked with the students on the operetta were Marjorie Wilson, Charity Griffith, Linda Herrington, and Harry Spickler. The operetta was a part of a career education unit taught on careers in the humanities, and was an extension of studies in early Greek theater, which had been presented earlier by John Miller, Social Studies teacher.

Trial Commissioners handle minor affairs of new District Court

[EDITOR'S NOTE: This is part six of a six-part series on the structure of Kentucky's new judicial system, whose implementation was completed Jan. 1, 1978. This story deals with the Kentucky Court of Justice's clerk and trial commissioner system in the new district courts.]

FRANKFORT — During the December 1976 special session of the Kentucky General Assembly, one of the major areas of controversy concerned the number of district judgeships to be established. Many legislators felt the 113 positions provided for in enabling legislation would be too small to allow the judges to adequately deal with their districts' caseloads.

"The judicial article and legislation included provisions for district judges to appoint trial commissioners to handle cases which involved minor affairs that would be too time-consuming for the district judge," according to William Davis, executive director of the Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC).

"Not all counties have a district judge," Mr. Davis said, "Counties such as Jefferson and Fayette have several judges, while counties with smaller populations may have to share a judgeship with other counties. In those smaller counties, where the district judge is not a resident, the judge can appoint a local attorney as trial commissioner and allow the commissioner to handle the less-demanding matters."

Mr. Davis pointed out that the commissioners do not have the same authority as district judge possesses. The state Supreme Court has already defined the trial commissioner's powers," he said. The trial commissioner may hold examining trials; set bail; accept pleas of guilty and impose sentences on offenses punishable only by a fine of $100 or less; conduct preliminary inquiries and order temporary custody in juvenile cases and probate wills and appoint executors and administrators of such estates.

"The trial commissioner's salary is limited to $7,200. In fact, only a few will be able to receive the maximum amount because there are funds available for an average salary of $6,500. But he or she is not restricted from continuing to operate a law practice," Mr. Davis said. He said the trial commissioner can be replaced by the district judge at the judge's pleasure.

Mr. Davis noted that the chief district judge in a district can be empowered by the state Supreme Court to appoint additional trial commissioners if the district's workload warrants it.

Also serving the district court, as well as the circuit court, is the circuit court clerk. Circuit clerks are elected to six-year terms and have been elevated to state official status. In addition to their court duties, circuit clerks will continue to sell motor vehicle operators' and boat licenses.

Comprehensive Care serves 111 in County

Three-year-old Linda (not her real name) was a disturbed child.

She had temper tantrums that included head banging. From birth she could sleep only brief periods of time. She had co-ordination problems, speech difficulty, was not toilet-trained, and seemed to be in a daze at times.

That was the situation when Linda was referred to a Comprehensive Care Center in the 17-county Bluegrass Region.

An extensive history was taken and it was found that Linda was an only child of a second marriage of both parents. Her mother works outside the home and the father works out of state and sees the family about one weekend a month. There are marital problems.

Linda was sent to the University of Kentucky Medical Center for a neurological evaluation, and after two visits there was put on medication.

The Comprehensive Care Center set up a behavior modification program for her mother to use in dealing with the child. The mother continues to be seen at the center and unsuccessful attempts have been made to include the father in Linda's treatment.

Despite this shortcoming the mother has described Linda's progress as "miraculous". Most of the child's problems have disappeared as her treatment program continues.

"The earlier a problem is identified and treatment begun, the greater the chances for recovery," said Thomas M. Layton, executive director of the Bluegrass Regional system.

"People must be encouraged to seek help before problems are compounded," he said.

Linda is one of nearly 10,000 persons who were served during the past fiscal year by the Bluegrass Regional Comprehensive Care Centers.

The number served in Nicholas County was 111. Most of these problems were in the emotional or mental category — 97. Other categories were alcohol abuse, 11; developmental disabilities, 3; and drug abuse, none.

A woman, we'll call her Mrs. Doe, went to a center early this year. She didn't consider her life worth living and had tried to commit suicide the night before.

She spoke of being useless, helpless and hopeless. She talked of being alone and far removed from her husband, family and friends.

She was considered in immediate danger and arrangements were made to get her in a private hospital in Lexington under the care of a Comprehensive Care psychiatrist. After a few days at the hospital she entered individual treatment at the center.

In the next five months she was able to discover and face her own feelings, and get control of her life. She is working at a job she enjoys, and is amazed that incidents which threw her into depression six months earlier now seem so small. She is off all her medicines now and is enjoying living.

A 40-ish man with a drinking problem for the past 15 years was hospitalized many times for detoxification while refusing further treatment.

Until a year ago his contacts with Comprehensive Care were minimal when he was in jail and needed emergency help. At that time he began to be violent toward his family and friends during drinking episodes.

He continued to refuse treatment but his wife and children were seen by Comprehensive Care each week. He finally consented to enter a state hospital for a 30-day treatment program.

He began drinking again, and was jailed a couple of times. A Comprehensive Care therapist arranged for his admission to an alcohol recovery center and he has continued in therapy after being discharged.

He is again working full-time and has remained sober for the longest period in many years.

The nonprofit centers offer general mental health and mental retardation services. Staff members include psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, alcohol and drug counselors, nurses, and other specialists.

The Comprehensive Care System, with mental health centers in each county, makes treatment available to anybody who needs it, regardless of ability to pay.

It has also made outpatient or partial hospitalization possible for many who in the past would have been hospitalized full-time.

Partial hospitalization, a day-care type treatment, costs about 70 per cent less, or about $25 a day as compared to $85 in a hospital. Still less expensive is what is called outpatient treatment, in which a client has an appointment, possibly once a week, with a psychiatrist or other therapist at the Comprehensive Care Center.

A 36-member volunteer board administers the program, with headquarters at 690 Newtown Road, Lexington. Counties in the regional network are Franklin, Woodford, Anderson, Scott, Bourbon, Harrison, Carlisle, Boyle, Mercer, Madison, Estill, Lincoln, Garrard, Fayette, Clark, Powell and Jessamine.

The Land Bank

When the day is ended, most men can only say that they have earned a wage. But when a farmer's day is over, he knows he has built something for tomorrow ... and beyond. It takes patience and hard work. And, often, borrowed capital to reach long term goals. That's where we can help you, just as we helped your father's generation and your grandfather's generation.

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions — horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle then strike it off list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.
