Kentucky concerned about litter

FRANKFORT — It could be because spring is here and it is more noticeable now that the snow is gone, but litter again is becoming a source of concern among people across the state.

Recent articles in several eastern Kentucky newspapers have expressed concern over the problem and the state Environmental Quality Commission voiced similar concerns at a recent meeting.

The situation, at least for the present, is unchanged from what it has been previously, according to state officials, but they point to legislation passed by the 1978 General Assembly as at least the beginning of a comprehensive anti-litter program.

The bill levies a three per cent per $100 tax on wholesalers of products packaged in metal, plastic, paper or glass. Revenues are to be used by the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection for the purchase and placement of litter receptacles across the state, employment of persons to clean up litter, increased enforcement of litter laws and the recycling of reusable litter. In addition, the department is to use funds for various public education campaigns aimed at preventing litter.

As to how successful the program will be, at least in the first two years that it is to run before re-examination by the 1980 General Assembly, no one is willing to say.

"The only thing 253 (the number of the bill passed by the legislature) can do in the near term is provide for going out and picking up litter," says Norm Schell, director of the department's Division of Hazardous Materials and Waste Management.

"To that extent it will relieve the problem of litter. However, what percentage of it will be eliminated I cannot say," he adds.

Schell says he wants to be as realistic as possible in his expectations for the program, mainly because it will be some time before revenues find their way back to the department. In fact by 1980 Schell estimates that the program will have "been in place" less than a year.

If the program is going to be a success, Schell believes it will be because of the education aspects of the bill aimed at behavior modification among people of the state. This, however, may take longer than two years to accomplish.

Presently, the only available tool for preventing litter is education through local enforcement of litters laws, but even this is beset by manpower problems at the state level and by patchwork enforcement at local levels, said Schell.

Despite the obstacles facing the program, Schell and other state officials say the important thing is that at least a planned and coordinated attack of litter is beginning.

The division is developing a strategy to determine the roles of state agencies and the all-important local agencies in litter prevention, collection and disposal.

"It is also necessary to determine a strategy for implementation; that is, putting out the barrels, picking it up and determining what kind of education programs might be effective," says Schell.

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions — horizontally, vertically, diagonally, forward. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle then strike it off list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.
