Easter Seals sponser national handicapped awareness week

National Handicapped Awareness Week, May 14-20, will be sponsored by the Kentucky Easter Seal Society to focus public attention on the abilities of handicapped persons as well as the problems in coping with architectural and attitudinal barriers.

For many years, the National Easter Seal Society has been a leading advocate in the campaign to eliminate man-made environmental barriers which infringe upon the rights of physically handicapped persons, according to Mrs. Virginia Creech, Lexington, president of the Kentucky Easter Seal Society.

National Handicapped Awareness Week was initiated in 1975 by the Society and its affiliates throughout the country as an intensified, one-week effort to heighten public awareness of the barriers problem as the first step toward achieving public commitment necessary to solve the problem.

Since that time other community service organizations and self-help groups of disabled persons have cooperated in Awareness Week activities planned to demonstrate the dicrimin atory impact of barriers in their communities. The need to change attitudes towards disabled persons is an integral part of Awareness Week programs.

"Many able-bodied members of society tend to equate any individual's disability rather than recognize that person's ability, training and experience," said Mrs. Creech.

"All of us are handicapped at various times during our lives as the result of accidents, disease or the physical problems of aging," she added. "Increasing accessibility of building and other facilities will benefit the total population."

Accoraing to Mrs. Creech, greater public awareness and understanding is needed to make sure that handicapped persons in our community can enjoy the same rights most of us take for granted.

Summer is a time for conserving

Winter is not the only time to think about energy conservation. There are also economical ways of saving on your utility bills in the summer. Listed below are a few suggestions fo saving water and energy throughout the summer months.

To keep your house cool, be sure it is well insulated. The insulation that preserves heat in winter, preserves cool air in summer. Close air ducts, registers and fireplace dampers when the air conditioner is on to prevent loss of cool air. Use as little air conditioning as possible. One degree of temperature can save five per cent of the energy used for air conditioning.

Other ways to save energy in your home are to turn off lights, television or other heat producing sources when not in use. Consider using fluorescent lighting. You get twice as much light from a fluorescent tube as from the incandescent bulb for about half the cost and energy use.

The bathroom is the most economical place to save water. Approximately 74% of the water used in a home is used in the bathroom. You can put a water-saving device in your toilet's water tank or, if you are buying a new toilet, choose one designed for saving water.

Take showers instead of baths, but don't let the water run excessively. The National Bureau of Standards estimates you can save twenty gallons of water per day by using a flow-restricting shower head and not letting the water run when not in use.

The next biggest savings of water can be in preventing a faucet from dripping. If it is the hot water faucet, savings are doubled.

There are numerous other methods of conserving energy in your home. No one is suggesting doing without water or electricity or any of our other energy resources; simply try to use these resources more efficiently. In doing so, waste will be kept at a minimum and you will save money.

Social security income to increase

Thomas A. Cortner, branch manager of the Maysville Social Security Office, announced today that social security and supplemental security income payments will increase automatically by 6.5 per cent beginning with the June 30 checks for SSI recipients, and the July 3 checks for social security beneficiaries.

This means that a retired worker under social security now receiving an average monthly payment of $295, will get $254 a month which will be reflected in the July 3 check. An individual receiving the maximum federal SSI benefit of $177.80 will now get $189.40 and a couple who received $266.70 will now get $284.10.

Tobacco is family crop, plays traditional role

by Bennett Roach
(For Burley Growers Assn.)

Despite major changes in agriculture over recent years, burley tobacco continues its traditional role as a family type crop, produced by hand labor and mainly by small growers.

The typical burley farm in the 14-state belt produces 10,000 lbs., or less each crop year. This size farm is by far the most numerous, making up 97.2 per cent of the total 296,600 quota farms in all the burley states. Also this group of 288,809 farms produces 78 per cent of all U. S. quota burley.

Next largest group is that producing 5,000 lbs., or less. These total 271,394 farm units, or 91.4 per cent and they produce 59.7 per cent of the total national poundage quota.

These are part of a quota production study made by the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association, Lexington, Ky. The analysis is based on ASCS statistics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, in a report on distribution of quotas by size groups for 1975.

A further breakdown was made in the Burley Association study for the states of Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia and Missouri, in which the co-op administers the price-support program.

In these the following is shown:

Kentucky farms growing 5,000 lbs., and under make up 84.7 per cent of the state's quota farms, and produce 46.7 per cent of the state's poundage quota.

In Kentucky the 10,000 lbs.-and-under farms number 133,836 and produce 68.9 per cent of the state's poundage quota.

Other states, farms 10,000 lbs. or less:

Ohio — 98.4 per cent of state's total burley farms; these grow 86.9 per cent of state's poundage quota.

Indiana — 99.4 per cent of state's total burley farms; 92 pct., of state's poundage quota.

West Virginia — 100 per cent of state's burley farms 10,000 lbs., or under.

Missouri — 90.5 per cent of state's burley farms, growing 86.9 per cent of state's quota poundage.

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions — horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle then strike it off list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.
