Shafer edited base newspapers as a member of the Air Force during World War II, was news editor of the semi-weekly Hillsboro, Ohio, Press Gazette and weekly Hillsboro News Herald.

He started his daily career as area bureau chief and state editor of The Dayton Daily News and became Kentucky political correspondent for The Enquirer in 1961.

Shafer also served the Cincinnati newspaper as Columbia bureau chief, Washington bureau chief, news editor and, for three years before joining KPA, was managing editor.

Shafer also owned a store in the

Burley changes

Smith said in 1978, producers generally found that only 10 per cent additional acreage was required to offset the reduced yields resulting from not harvesting the four lower leaves. The department began the program of encouraging producers to leave lower-stalk flue-cured tobacco in the field in order to reduce the amount of generally lower-quality tobacco entering the loan program.

Other proposed changes provide that:

— Producers be required to file reports of tobacco on hand at the end of the marketing season.

— Supplemental reports would be required from dealers and buyers that

State gains in education

Kentucky's rank among the states in per-pupil expenditure and average salary of teachers is expected to jump several notches this year.

Projections in the National Education Association's new publication titled "Estimates of School Statistics, 1978-79" put Kentucky at 30th place in per-pupil spending and 20th in average salary of teachers.

For the previous year Kentucky ended up in third place in per-pupil spending and 40th place in average salary of teachers.

An estimated $1,561 (from state, federal, and local funds) will be spent this year on each Kentucky public-school pupil in average daily attendance, compared with last year's $1,378.

The average salary of Kentucky teachers is estimated at $13,230 this year, compared with last year's $11,723. (Statistics for the NEA publication are supplied by state departments of education. The Kentucky salary figure is published as $13,120 with a rank of 31, but the Kentucky Department of Education revised the figure to $13,230 — with a rank of 30 — to take fee inclusion in the report.)

Despite the increases, Kentucky remains below the averages for the seven bordering states in both categories. However, the gap will narrow considerably in the salary comparisons if the would reflect tobacco acquired by them and not previously reported in their season reports, due Feb. 1 for flue-cured and April 1 for burley.

A proposal applying only to burley tobacco provides that, with some exceptions, a farm not be allowed to transfer a quota both to and from in the same year.

Comments should be sent to the Acting Director, Production Adjustment, USDA-ASCS, P. O. Box 2415, Washington, D. C. 20013.

Details of these proposals as well as other proposed changes in the burley and flue-cured tobacco program appear in the Feb. 13 Federal Register.

"This is quite an improvement," said Kentucky Education Association (KEA) president Doris Martin. "Last year the difference was $1,228 — more than twice as much."

"We are on the way to reaching the seven-state average in 1979-80, as Governor Carroll predicted when he and the General Assembly adopted KEA's legislative program to reach that goal," Mrs. Martin said.

Governor Carroll in his 1978 budget message predicted that the seven states would average $14,610 in 1979-80, compared with a Kentucky average of at least $14,615 and a rank of about 24th. Currently the State Department of Education is estimating the Kentucky average will go to $14,630 in 1979-80.

In per-pupil spending the seven-state average for 1978-79 is estimated at $1,727, compared with Kentucky's $1,562. The difference is $165. Last year the difference was $177.

Kentucky in 1978-79 is expected to be $1,810 below the national average of $1,090 for teacher salaries. Estimates also put Kentucky $250 below the national average of $1,917 for per-pupil spending.

As it did last year, Kentucky ranks second in the nation (just after Hawaii) in per cent of revenue (to public schools) received — 71.6% — from the state level. From the local level Kentucky schools receive 12.9%. The remaining 15.5% comes from the federal level.

The NEA report shows that for the first time in the history of tax-supported school financing, the states — and not local governments — are providing the lion's share of school revenue.

The state is providing 47.4% nationally while local government provides 63.7% and the federal government 8.8%.

Architect to study school roof

The Nicholas County Board of Education has entered into a contract with architects Don Shelton and Associates of Lexington to inspect the elementary school roof and recommend repair procedures.

The building has been plagued with roof and drainage problems since its construction eight years ago. During periods of cold, snowy weather a layer of ice forms on low portions of the roof and melts from the inside up, causing some leaks through the building.

The board also voted to purchase a pickup truck from Harper's Garage in Carlisle for the purpose of hauling commodities, and to contract with Wagener-Wilson, Inc. to build a line fence on the northern boundary of the school property.

In other action the board: — approved sick and/or maternity leave for Jacqueline Jones and Katie Hunt;

— added Judy Hawkins, Gregory Reid and Maureen Miller to the substitute teacher list;

— approved the use of the elementary school for an educational meeting sponsored by District 10 of the Masonic Lodge on May 18, and — hired Louise Curran as an aide in the migrant program.
