Who Was That Lady? A famous beauty of our early history, this woman introduced elegance and style to the White House in the new capital in 1801. Thomas Jefferson was the wife of the Secretary of State. Her name was Martha Washington. "First Lady" as a proxy for the actual hostess of the White House. Including the period when her husband served as President, she influenced the political high society for laws pertaining to botanical patenting, however, she made it possible for breeders to file to collect royalties on their original hybrid creations no matter how they are propagated. Patents on new varieties of plants were not granted until 1874.

Laugh Out An inmate of an asylum who was punished by a wheelbarrow under his back. Who was that lady? The retort: "Yesterday they filled it with bricks."
