

Fuel clause under fire

(Jan. 11, 1979) — Consumer advocates today called upon a legislative committee to eliminate fuel charges on utilities bills.

Leading the attack was the Attorney General's Office. Assistant Attorney General Charles Beard said fuel adjustment charges on electric bills should be abolished for a variety of reasons.

Attorney General Robert Stephens cautioned consumers, however, that abolition of the fuel adjustment charges will not reduce the cost of utilities.

The consumer position was heard today in the last three days of the hearings conducted by the Joint Committee on Public Utilities, which is studying whether fuel adjustment charges should be taken in the acquisition of electric power. Beard said the fuel adjustment clause and the purchased gas adjustment. The fuel adjustment clause is the means by which the cost of coal used to generate electricity is passed on to the consumer. The purchased gas adjustment is the means by which the cost of coal used to generate electricity is passed on to the consumer.

Primary attention has been focused upon the fuel adjustment clause.

In calling for abolition of the fuel adjustment clause, Beard said the clause does not provide an adequate means for utilities management to seek the lowest possible price for the coal it buys.

Beard also said the clause provides cost increases to the consumer without benefit of a public hearing.

Greater care should be taken in the acquisition of electric power, Beard said. This means that electric utilities, facilities, consideration should be given to obtaining electricity from power pools. This means that electric utilities would purchase all or some of their power needs from other utilities.
