Russia wants 25 million tons of grain

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has issued the following statement: "Officials of the United States and the Soviet Union met here today for the eighth session of regular semi-annual consultations under the current US-USSR grain supply agreement. The agreement covers trade in wheat and corn for the period Oct. 1, 1978, through Sept. 30, 1981. "Based upon availability in the United States and anticipated Soviet import requirements, it was agreed that the supply level for U.S. wheat and corn could be up to 25 million tons for the current year of the grain supply agreement between the two countries, without the necessity for further consultations. "Under terms of the agreement, now in its fourth year, the Soviet Union buys at least 12 million tons — half wheat, half corn — U.S. grain in each of the five years of the agreement. The agreement also requires that purchases above 12 million tons must be preceded by a Soviet import availability agreement between the two countries in an increased supply level for the year concerned.

"Under Secretary of Agriculture Dale E. Hathaway headed the U.S. delegation at today's consultation. The delegation from Moscow was led by Boris S. Gierbsev, Soviet deputy minister of foreign trade. Soviet officials have confirmed that their purchases for the fourth year already total about 8 million tons, and it was indicated that the new agreed supply level of 25 million tons takes into account current U.S. supplies and export availabilities as well as anticipated USSR import requirements for the 1978-80 season. "He said the new supply level does not imply a particular USSR purchase plan at this time, since the actual volume of purchases will depend upon progress of shipments, possible logistical constraints, market conditions, any adverse weather developments that may affect shipping, and other factors. "Hathaway also indicated that the new supply level and the anticipated increase in shipments to the USSR this season, are expected to have little or no significant impact on the general level of grain prices, since world markets have already recognized a probable rise in world trade and USSR imports from all origins in the year ahead. "Even if the volume of fourth year trade were to reach the full amount of the newly-agreed supply level, supplies on hand will be adequate to meet other anticipated domestic and export requirements, and maintain sufficient carryover into the 1980-81 season, Hathaway said. "It was agreed that the two sides would remain in close contact during the interim with respect to the regular session of semi-annual consultations next spring, and that additional consultation would be arranged during the interim if at any time this appeared necessary."

Did you ever sit in the shade of a tree on a hot summer day and wonder why it was so much cooler there than in the shade of a building? According to experts in this sort of thing, the cooling of the air under the tree is caused by the continual evaporation of water from the leaves. The faster the water, the more rapid the evaporation. Scientists estimate that a good-sized tree will give off over 25,000 gallons of moisture during a summer season. This is enough to cover the ground under the tree with more than a foot of water. So the moral of this item is: if you would have a cool house in summer plant trees around it. They will serve as natural air conditioners and save energy.

All of us gardeners talk about nature and generally we think of it as something that comes from the backyard. The derivation of the word, however, indicates something different. Etymologists say the word "nature" comes from the Latin words, "natus" and "genus" which mean "to be born" and "kind" respectively. "Nature" is a noun, and it is the quality of being born, or the quality of being of a certain kind. The word "nature" is also used to describe the characteristics of a person or an object. For example, we might say that a person's nature is to be kind, or that a dog's nature is to be loyal. The word "nature" is also used to describe the characteristics of a thing. For example, we might say that the nature of water is to be liquid, or that the nature of fire is to be hot. The word "nature" is a very important word, and it is one that we should all understand.

UK sets high school press day

A variety of activities highlight the schedule for the annual Kentucky high school press days Tuesday and Thursday, Nov. 8 and 9 at the University of Kentucky with newspaper sessions presented on the first day and yearbook sessions on the second day. The Kentucky High School Press Association and the UK Journalism Association sponsor the press days. A keynote session at 9 a.m. follows an annual registration period in Memorial Hall each day. Each student will participate in two two-hour instruction sessions in a variety of interest areas and hands-on experience is available. Keynote speaker for the newspaper day events will be Mike Simpson, director of the Student Press Law Center, Washington, D.C. Interest areas for newspaper staffs will be in news and feature writing, sports, editorial, design and editing, photography, photo editing and business.

Keynote speaker for the yearbook day events will be Col. Charles Sorenson, headmaster of Augusta Military Academy, Fort Belvoir, Va., one of the most respected and influential persons in yearbook journalism. Interest areas for yearbook staff members are in design, business, advertising and photography. High school advisors attending each of the press days will lunch together at noon in the president's Room of the Student Center. Participants must be pre-registered by Oct. 26. Those late to the event must pay a late registration fee in addition to regular fees. Nancy Green of the School of Journalism is director of the press days. Interested persons may call (606) 257-1900 for further information.
