October is Kentucky festival month

By Helen Price Stacy
Kentucky's beautiful and balmy autumn holds adventures for weekend travelers as communities throughout the state gear up for annual harvest festivals and fairs.

The first week in October will find apple growers bringing their produce to the popular Kentucky Apple Festival in downtown Paintsville. Johnson counties know how to put on a show to attract thousands of visitors.

At the festival, two of the biggest attractions, in addition to apples, are a giant flea market and arts and crafts exhibits.

Other activities include an antique car show coordinated by Calix Kelley; an apple auction conducted by Allen Teller; an apple ball with the direction of Sherry Mullins; the apple run— Diane Porter and Jeanne Dorton, arts and crafts — Nikki Barber; baby and infant festival — Sherry Mullins; and hand festival — Kenneth Price.

Kentucky writers celebration set

"A Celebration of Kentucky Writers" is being planned by the Kentucky Arts Commission in cooperation with the University of Louisville for Nov. 9-11. The three-day gathering, the first of its kind to be held in Kentucky, will bring together prominent Kentucky writers and Kentuckians interested in literature.

Readings, workshops, and informal exchange sessions are scheduled. Robert Penn Warren, Harriette Arnow, and Cleon Brooks have been invited to attend, along with other outstanding Kentucky authors.
