Miss Ring is a student at Nicholas County High School.

Mr. Price is a 1979 graduate of Nicholas County High School, engaged in farming.

A June wedding is being planned.

Sewing machines. . .are they going out of style?

By Joy Aschenbach
National Geographic News Service

At first they were viewed with suspicion. So, the early ones were sold in elegant New York showrooms with carved walnut furniture, gilded ornaments, and carpeting — places where Victorian women were not ashamed to be seen.

They were advertised as machines "designed to be the best style of art," suitable for the parlor or boudoir, and "peculiarly calculated for female" use.

Since the late 1850s the sewing machine has steadily threaded its way into American homes — more than 2.2 million purchased each year at the peak. It became an accepted, if not indispensable, household appliance — something almost every young wife and mother wanted.

Recently, however, American women have started to cut their ties to the sewing machine, and sales have dropped below 2 million machines a year.

Out Jogging

"Women today are out jogging and out working. They don't want to sit at home in front of a sewing machine," Harold Gram, executive secretary of the Independent Sewing Machine Dealers of America, Inc., commented. "We are now in a period of re-educating women that sewing is the thing to do."

The head of Singer Co., which shares the top of the U.S. market with Sears, blames the "blue-jean era" and the anything-goes fashion styles for the slump in sewing machine sales.

In his annual report to the stockholders this spring, Singer chairman Joseph B. Flavin cited a list of reasons, everything from blue jeans to the fact that almost 50 percent of adult women work. With more income, working women, particularly those in dual-income homes, can better afford ready-to-wear clothes.

Most women who sewed before they started working will still sew, according to Betty Watts, of the National Home Sewing Association. But, she explained, "the sewing that is being done now is high quality." It is "quality" that cannot be bought today at reasonable prices, sewing industry officials contend.

Not Like Grandma

In 1975, when inflation rose and sales began to slip, the industry — with White House support — launched a "Sew and Save" campaign. Today sewing to save is not emphasized because a garment frequently can be purchased for the cost of making it. It is for quality, style, and creativity that they are urging people to make their own clothes.

"It's no longer like our grandmothers who sewed for their children. Women who sewing for themselves today — to be more fashionable," maintained Richard Sallpante, of the White Sewing Machine Co., which manufactures its own machines and also is the exclusive U.S. distributor for the Swiss-made Elna.

Industry officials also are concerned because girls are not exposed to sewing in public schools the way they used to be. "Students are not learning just straight sewing as they once did. They are still taught the basic skills, but they don't go into advanced sewing," Bertha King, of the U.S. Office of Education, explained. Sewing is coupled with consumer education, such as learning when to buy and when to sew.

Another factor putting a crimp in the sewing machine market is the cost of the machine itself, which now ranges from about $170 to more than $1,000 for the highly sophisticated models. The average well-equipped machine costs about $500.

Although recognized as an American invention, most sewing machines are now manufactured in other countries, where production costs are lower. The only machines still made in the United States are Singer's top of the line.

The sewing machine market is at its best in developing countries of Latin America, Africa, and Southeast Asia. At home, manufacturers like Singer are reducing the number of retail stores and sewing machine models to cut costs. And to encourage sewing at home, they're holding sewing classes in the stores — attended by men as well as women.

Kay's Kitchen

— By Kay Fisher —

If you are counting calories, dieting, watching, or whatever you want to call it, the one thing to remember is you must push away from the table. If you over-eat of even a low calorie dish, you are not going to lose any weight because you will be taking in more calories than your system will burn.

If you still have homemade candy, cake and other goodies left from the holidays, freeze them. They will taste wonderful served in small portions a month or more from now. Remember you can cut slices or pieces of cake while still frozen, so get out only what you want for one meal. Don't have it out where temptation will take over.

Really you don't have to have a lot of recipes for low calorie foods, just use your head. Most people know pork chops have more calories than lean beef, so stay away from pork for awhile. Potatoes in themselves are not fattening, it is the sour cream, butter, and gravy you put on them that does you in. So, they don't taste as good, but think how noble you will feel when you split a baked potato and sprinkle it lightly with salt! 90 to 100 calories compared to 200 calories for one cup mashed potato, or more if you put sour cream and/or butter on a baked potato. Most casseroles have more calories than a vegetable simply served crisp cooked with a little seasoning. You can even serve a pat of butter on it and still have fewer calories.

Here is a recipe for something a bit different if you want a change of fare.

SHRIMP STROGANOFF

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon dill weed
1 chicken bouillon
1 cup boiling water
1 4-ounce can mushrooms, stems and pieces, drained
2 small cans shrimp
1 cup plain yogurt or sour cream, optional (more calories)

Melt butter in saucepan; add onion and cook until limp. Blend in flour and dill weed; cook a few minutes, stirring. Add bouillon cube dissolved in the boiling water, and the mushrooms. Cook, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and boils. Add shrimp and heat until hot thru, don't boil. Stir in yogurt or sour cream and heat to serving temperature. Very good served over green asparagus spears. Use canned or frozen spears.

Here is a tasty salad dressing (only 6 calories per tablespoon)

BUTTERMILK SALAD DRESSING

1 cup buttermilk
1½ teaspoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon instant onion
1 tablespoon parsley flakes
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
½ teaspoon garlic salt
Dash tabasco

Combine all ingredients and let stand in refrigerator for at least an hour, preferably overnight. Serve over salad greens, sliced tomatoes or fresh mushrooms.

FLUFFY CHOCOLATE CREAM

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup unsweetened cocoa
1/8 teaspoon salt
2 cups liquid non-fat milk
2 eggs, separated
1½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar

Combine gelatin, sugar, cocoa and salt in saucepan, mixing well. Stir in small amount of milk to make paste. Blend in egg yolks until smooth. Gradually add remaining milk. Place over medium heat and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and comes just to a boil. Remove from heat; stir in vanilla. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture thickens. Beat egg whites and cream of tartar until stiff and glossy. Beat gelatin-chocolate mixture until smooth; fold in beaten egg whites. Turn into individual serving dishes or a 1-quart mold. Chill until set. Makes about 4 or 5 servings, approximately 126 calories per serving.

Mrs. John Lance Baxley

Wedding solemnized Dec. 22

Miss Leanna Joyce Dixon of Ocala, Fla., became the bride of John Lance Baxley, also of Ocala, Saturday, Dec. 22 at the First Christian Church of Ocala with Rev. Henry F. Speight officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Dixon Sr., of Ocala, formerly of Carlisle. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Alma W. Dixon of Lexington, formerly of Carlisle and the niece of Mrs. Anna Berns of Carlisle.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lee Baxley of Weirsdale, Fla.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of candlelight crepe satin. The gown was fashioned with a scooped neckline, sheer Juliette sleeves and an empire bodice. Her fingertip veil of illusion was trimmed with lace and attached to a back of pearls. She carried a bouquet of roses, carnations and baby's breath.

Ms. Debra Bowman of Waycross, Ga. served as matron of honor. Bill Baxley, brother of the groom, of Weirsdale, served as best man. Ushers were Tom, Steve and Neal Dixon, brothers of the bride, of Ocala. Lance and Chad Baxley, sons of the bridegroom, served as ring bearers.

A reception was held at the church by the parents of the bride. The couple will make their home in Ocala.

Food programs for elderly increased

The U.S. Department of Agriculture will supply nearly $65 million in donated foods and cash to elderly nutrition programs during fiscal year 1980 — an increase of 38.5 to 43 cents per meal, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman said.

"This will be a 12 percent cost-of-living increase in donated foods and cash assistance USDA provides to federally-funded elderly nutrition programs," Foreman said.

The adjustment reflects the rise in the consumer price index for food away from home last year. The new level of assistance applies to all meals served from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30, 1980.

Nutrition programs for the elderly are run by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare with USDA donating food or providing cash in lieu of food to states taking part in these programs.

Last year about 150 million meals were served to people over 65 at community centers, schools, churches or other sites convenient for the elderly. In some states hot meals were delivered to the homes of elderly people unable to come to the centers to get them.

Notice of the cost-of-living increase was published in the Dec. 18 Federal Register.

THE CARING CORNER

Ecclesiastes 3:6 "A time to seek, and a time to lose."

I received a gift the other day that I am very fond of. . .not so much the gift, I guess, as the giver. It is a simple gift that she gave me and I have it hanging in my office. . .it's a calendar. And when I thanked her for it she smiled and said, "Well, it's something you can use every day!"

How true it is. Something we use every day. But a question comes to me now. Do I call upon my calendar as much or more as I call upon my Lord? Do I look at my calendar as often as I look to heaven? Do I count the days as readily as I count the hours that I hope to spend in the fellow ship of Christ?

My calendar will either remind me of all the time I will have to live with Christ, or it will become a bitter reminder for me of all the days that I have lived without him.

How about your calendar?

Join us this Sunday as we learn to live with Christ.

Bell names new manager

The board of directors of South Central Bell Telephone Company has approved the request of Paul D. McCandless, vice president for Bell's Kentucky operations throughout the '70s, to retire effective April 1.

McCandless announced that B.H. Henson has been appointed vice president for Kentucky, effective January 1. Henson is currently an assistant vice president — public affairs for the company in Alabama.

In announcing the retirement, Wallace R. Bunn, South Central's president, named McCandless senior vice president for Kentucky in recognition of his outstanding contribution to the company and to the community. McCandless will assume this position January 1.

"Since becoming our chief operating officer for Kentucky in 1976," Bunn continued, "Paul McCandless has skillfully guided a company operation that has grown from assets of $436.6 million to $1.1 billion, from 900,000 telephones in service to 1.4 million, and from 575,000 customers to more than 700,000."

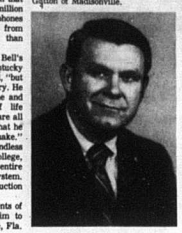
"We're proud of South Central Bell's many accomplishments in Kentucky under his leadership," Bunn said, "but numbers don't tell the whole story. He has given unselfishly of his time and energy to the betterment of life throughout his native state. We are all proud of the accomplishments that he has made and will continue to make."

A native of Central City, McCandless is a graduate of Georgetown College, where he starred in football. His entire career has been with the Bell System. He started in 1940 on a construction crew in Owensboro.

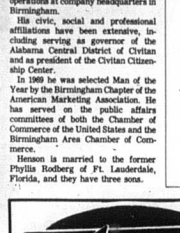
His positions in various segments of Bell's operations have taken him to Atlanta, Miami and Jacksonville, Fla. In 1964 he was named general manager for Kentucky operations and in 1970 he was elected an officer of the company and named vice president for Kentucky.

McCandless is a lifetime trustee of the James Graham Brown Foundation and a director of Capital Holding Corporation, Inc., United Kentucky, Inc. and Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Kentucky among many other business and civic affiliations.

He is married to the former Winona Gatton of Madisonville.



McCandless



Henson

Henson, a native Alabamian, began his career with the telephone company in 1960 following graduation from Auburn University.

Since then he has held various positions in the company's traffic, marketing and planning departments. Prior to assuming his current position in 1975, Henson was assistant vice-president for systems planning and operations at company headquarters in Birmingham.

His civic, social and professional affiliations have been extensive, including serving as governor of the Alabama Central District of Civitan and as president of the Civitan Citizenship Center.

In 1969 he was selected Man of the Year by the Birmingham Chapter of the American Marketing Association. He has served on the public affairs committees of both the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the Birmingham Area Chamber of Commerce.

Henson is married to the former Phyllis Rodberg of Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, and they have three sons.

Beef producers to vote on national research program

Beef producers will vote early in 1980 on whether they want a nationally coordinated beef research and information program.

The upcoming referendum was announced by Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, P.R. Smith. He said beef producers will be asked to register for the referendum between Jan. 28 and Feb. 6. They'll vote by secret ballot Feb. 19-22.

The order issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture authorizing the program provides for a beef board of up to 68 producers to administer the program. There would be as many as five non-voting consumer advisors to the board.

Each state or geographic area would be represented on the board in proportion to its share of the U.S. cattle industry.

The program would be funded by assessments based on the value of cattle sold. During the first two years of the program, assessments could be up to two-tenths of one percent of the value of cattle sold (20 cents per $100).

After two years, the board could recommend an increase up to five-tenths of one percent.

All sellers in the marketing chain would be assessed. The buyer at the point of slaughter would deduct the total assessment and forward it to the board. Any producer who objected could receive a refund of the assessment paid.

Ray Fitzgerald, administrator of the Department's Agricultural and Conservation Service, said his agency will conduct the referendum. The Department's Agricultural Marketing Service would monitor the program.

Rules for registering and voting in referendums have changed, noted Fitzgerald. He said the department determined that 10 days (8 working days) would be sufficient for all producers to register and that the four-day voting period would result in a more efficient voting procedure and reduce administrative costs.

A similar order, issued in 1977, although favored by 56.4 percent of voting producers, did not receive the required two-thirds approval. Since that time, the Beef Research and Information Act has been amended by Congress so that a majority of producers will be sufficient for approval of an order.

Following the change in legislation, beef industry organizations proposed a new order. A public hearing has been held in five locations. Based on the hearing testimony, the department issued a recommended decision and order in September.

Comments were accepted for 45 days and were considered in developing the order announced last week.

Producers may register and vote at local ASCS offices. Registration and voting can be completed by mail if information and ballots are requested in advance.

The order and notice of referendum was scheduled for publication in the Federal Register Dec. 14.

Copies of the order can be obtained from the Livestock, Poultry, Grain and Seed Division, AMS, Room 2610-S, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Referendum rules can be obtained from local ASCS offices or from the Emergency and Indemnity Programs Division, ASCS, Room 4095-S, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C.
