Editor's notes

All clear

Like everyone else I spent more anxious moments last Wednesday night when the Natural Weather Service issued another torpedo watch for Nicholas County.

I parked self next to the radio and, for once, I wasn't looking for the Stones. I wanted some hard information and after scanning the dial from one end to the other and back again I found a station that was giving the weather.

And it sounded great! Highs in the low 80s, low at night around 65, relative humidity not to exceed 40 percent, chance of rain 10 percent Thursday, 10 percent Friday and 20 percent Saturday.

But the next few words really rained on my parade of happy thoughts: "...and that's the weather for western New York."

It was probably skip that brought those signals down to Saltwell but that's one skip I could have skipped.

Name game

I can sympathize with Lincoln George-Tyler Brown, who went through somewhat of an identity crisis during his first week of life.

When I was born my folks had girls' names selected because they already had one boy and naturally they were looking for some sort of balance. I hated to disappoint them but I had very little to do with the matter.

But just look at what happened to my younger brother, who also came along when a lady was expected.

Mom and Dad called him Joseph Anthony. If he'd had his say in those early days he probably would have requested that he be called Anthony or Tony.

But Joe was his name and Joe was what we called him. I don't know who was the first to realize it but he got a look at what was in store for him when he started school.

The teachers called him Joseph, but his friends called him Joe. And when they put it together, they started calling him Jo-Ker (Joe Kerr?).

Needless to say he's put up with it for these 28 years with mostly good humor. But one thing he won't do is shell out $25-plus for a personalized license plate.

I have seen him smile, though, when somebody takes exception to one of his flights of humor and says, "What are you, some kind of joker?" and then realize what they said. And Ol' Joe never has to answer that one.

Boom busted

It's a sad, but true, fact these days that the only people concerned with selling real estate that are making any money are the folks that manufacture the "For Sale" signs.

End of an era

There I was, camera at the ready, batteries all charged and beady eyes focused when one of the ladies in charge of the Miss Harrison RECC pageant at the co-op's annual meeting asked me not to take pictures of the swimsuit competition.

What! No swimsuit pictures? That's like asking Babe Ruth to bunt. It's like asking you to eat hot dogs without mustard. It's like asking the Carlisle City Council to finish a meeting in less than three hours. You just don't do it.

But I did, albeit reluctantly. I didn't get a reason and didn't ask for one but a world where you can't take pictures of bathing beauties is gonna knock the bottom out of Kodak stock.

Is it constitutional?

I been going to city council meetings up and down Kentucky for nigh on 13 years now and there is always one constant: the dog problem.

A wise old commissioner in another city once said: "Dogs and line fences have caused more shootings in Kentucky than anything else" and I believe him.

The Carlisle City Council grappled with its dog problem Monday night and one of the solutions suggested was to send 'em to the Mason County dog pound.

I can see some do-gooder get hold of this now and file a suit against busing dogs, claiming their constitutional rights have been violated.

There's always two kinds of dogs: yours and mine. Yours cause all the problems while mine never do. Yours run wild while mine are free spirited. Yours dump it everywhere while mine are toilet trained.

A lot of dog wardens have the problem well in hand. If they get a call about a dog causing trouble they find said animal and say, "Halt, or I'll shoot". Then it's usually "Boom, boom, out go the lights."

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in an order you're probably not familiar with: diagonally, backwards. Draw pencil around each letter of a word found in this puzzle then strike it off the list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the 25-can number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.
