Free enterprise

By Anthony Harrison

The Fords and Edisons of the past, who symbolize the free enterprise system, weren't the last of their breed.

John Chamberlain, distinguished journalist and economic historian, writes in a special paper prepared for the Heritage Foundation that "Our private-business enterprise system continues to be spurred in the development of new frontiers by an endless flow of creative frontiersmen."

Americans often tend to think that the enterprisers belong to history, that in this age of bureaucracy and regulation the enterprising spirit cannot survive. Happily, this isn't the case.

Almost 20 years ago, Mr. Chamberlain published a book entitled "The Enterprising Americans," which told the story of America's business and industrial pioneers. His latest essay adds important chapters on present-day enterprisers.

Who are the new enterprising Americans?

They are John Lindbergh, son of the Lone Eagle, who has "deserted the upper air for the seas, raising salmon for the restaurant market in protected tanks in Puget Sound"; Henry Parks, a black American, who put his Pork Sausage Company on the national map; Robert Noyce and Gordon Moore who created Intel Corp., based on micro-miniaturization involving the production of transistors that can be inscribed on a silicon chip."

Other enterprising Americans are An-

Wang who developed an electronic mail system; Anastasio Kyriakides who developed a system of instant translators; E.H. Clark who created oil-service tool supplying companies; Frederick W. Smith who organized Federal Express, an air freight parcel service that owns a fleet of 52 planes.

One of the best known of the new enterprisers is Ray Kroc, who at age 50 formed McDonald's, the fast-food chain that dispenses billions of hamburgers. He provides work for hundreds of thousands of teenagers.

Despite a hostile government and a multitude of Ralph Nader types, free enterprise is doing fine in America. As Mr. Chamberlain says, the "business sense of the past 20 years completely discredits those who sing the monopoly blues." New builders, new manufacturers, new providers of services are entering the market all the time.

In describing the fecundity of the free enterprise system, Mr. Chamberlain points out that "the work of the new enterprising Americans is the key to this country having the best fed, best-dressed and best-housed people in the world...All of this work, the work of the enterprising Americans is dismissed contemptuously by Ralph Nader's anti-growth legends. In the face of all the enterprise and accomplishment, it's amazing that Ralph Nader, the ultimate know-nothing, has an audience for his pitiful tales.

FRANKFORT — Primary election results strongly indicate that Kentucky's seven U.S. House incumbents face little if any danger in the November election.

The only possibility of a contest is in the Sixth District where Kentucky State Senator Tom Easterly, D-Frankfort, will try to unseat incumbent Larry Hopkins, R Lexington.

Two years ago Easterly defeated incumbent Democrat John Brockridge in the primary, but Easterly was defeated by Hopkins in November, the first Republican to hold that House seat for decades.

Easterly defeated John Young Brown Sr., Edwin Earl Miller and David Lee.

Hopkins was unopposed in the primary. In November he will have the advantage of being from the largest populated county (Fayette) in the Sixth District. Fayette is a swing county and can go either way in an election, but it is known for preferring its own over outsiders. Easterly got about eight times as many votes as his three opponents.

In the presidential vote, Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter were early voters in Kentucky and it appears they will be chosen as the standard bearers of their party conventions later this year.

U.S. Senator Wendell Ford ran away from his opposition in the primary and will likely take re-election in the fall. He will face Republican Frank A. Farmer, Democrat state auditor Tom Robinson in the presidential race.

Here is how the seven U.S. House of Representatives races will likely be chosen in Kentucky this fall:

First District — Incumbent Carroll Hubbard, Democrat Republican.

Second District — Incumbent William Natcher, D-Bowling Green, will face election, but it is known for preferring its own over outsiders.

Third District — Incumbent Rep. Ron Mazcos will face Republican Richard Ceder.

Fourth District — Incumbent Republican Gene Sawyer will face Phil McGary.

Fifth District — Republican Harold Rogers will face the nomination in a large field when incumbent Dr. Tim Lee Carter decided not to seek reelection after serving two terms in Washington. Rogers will face Ted Merzon of Richmond.

Sixth District — Democrat Rep. Carl Perkins, dean of Kentucky's congressional delegation, will have no opposition in the presidential race.

The presidential race can and probably will have a strong influence upon the Sixth District Congressional race. It just depends upon how strong a campaign the state Democrat Party makes in the presidential race.

Mercury vapors

by Warren R. Fisher

I thought I had seen it all, that's what I thought the bishop thinks I'm a woodpecker lit on the trunk of a small ash tree in Lake Carmine. The may bird proceeded head down the trunk until he found a choice insect that suited his appetite.

Having shown off in this manner. He flutters upward, lands sideways on the trunk until he spies a bug either in the air or on the ground, then makes a dive like a flycatcher. This raucous sounding bird with his black neck and throat of blue may be as bad as some bird books describe him, but at least he doesn't stoop as low as the cowbird, respectfully.

Letters

To The Carlisle Mercury:

"As the head of my household, my livelihood has been threatened by the Blue Grass Industries for the past 25 years. Likewise, I am sure that my paycheck, and those of others who work at BGJ, have helped the local business earn their livelihood, too.

The Food Worker's and Commercial Union is trying to organize us. I have listened to their side of the story, but I haven't found anything that the Union can do for me that I haven't already been done by the Company's management anyway."

Now, why should I spend my money, for someone else to talk for me, when I've always felt free to talk to anyone in the company that I needed to. In this day and time, who needs an extra production company coming in and costing each month for union dues? And, if a strike should occur, there would be no unemployment checks or company benefits to see me through during it. The management has spent $30,000 in building this company, and as it has grown and prospered, they have paid higher wages and provided better benefits, year after year. I'm proud to say that in all the years that I've worked at Blue Grass, I've never had to stand in an unemployment line.

I feel that the company has stood by me through both the bad and good times, and now, I feel it is my time to stand up for the company. If you call on all of the people who, like me, have been able to make a living for themselves by working at Blue Grass, and the business leaders of this area, and the people who have spent our paychecks, to speak out for keeping Blue Grass Industries unto free."

Sincerely yours,
Jack Cooney
