Tell'em about it

A Carlisle minister stopped by last Thursday to register a complaint. Before he could tell me what it was, I guessed. Every so often the drive-ins add the Mercury reserves certain material that is not always in the best of taste.

Could speak to the boss and we would contact the advertiser to let them they may be losing more customers than they are gaining. It might be best, I said, if some people who agree with you write an letter so we can back up our claims. Every so often when we have to police an ad the person running the ad gets a case of First Amendment jingles and threatens to sue because we don't do business with them. But at times I have seen the boss pull out one that went too far.

Last week we might have let one slip through. I admit. What the minister objected to mainly was a drawing of a man in bed with two women. (At the risk of sounding risqué I say that fellow's a little overtopped.) Anyway, we both agreed that it had to touch children the right thing to do when they can go to the movies or turn on the television and see people who do the wrong things happening.

CALORIE COUNTDOWN

BY SUSAN DUFF

We Americans are drinking a lot of bottled water these days. About 400 million gallons per year. Some are bottled because the local tap water smells like lake-dislike water, while others say they're afraid the local tap water is ominous. Some people think bottled water is healthier, but there is no evidence. There is no arguing about taste, and since city water, although still contaminated, is still potable. But in bottled water, there are two things to consider: About half the bottled water on the shelves of your supermarket comes from natural springs or wells. Even so, not all brands are free of bacteria. Surveys have shown that in a few cases the bottled water had a higher bacterial count than tap water. Some bottled water, however, is not. It comes right from the tap. It's known as manufactured or filtered water. It's been purified and filtered to improve its taste, smell and appearance. But some of themselves to be included in the estate of Everett E. Plantinga, deceased. His will named Mrs. E. Plantinga, his wife, as executrix. His will named Mrs. E. Plantinga, his wife, as executrix. His will named Mrs. E. Plantinga, his wife, as executrix.
