Summer is outdoor drama time

Drama takes to the outdoors in the summer in Kentucky.

A veteran in outdoor drama (since 1950), Kentucky offers theater buffs everything from plays based on local history to Shakespeare and Broadway musicals.

"The Stephen Foster Story" opens its 22nd season June 7 at J. Dan Talbott Amphitheater in My Old Kentucky Home State Park, Bardstown. Written by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Paul Green, the musical is performed within a stone's throw of Federal Hill, which inspired the Foster ballad "My Old Kentucky Home."

"Foster" runs through Aug. 31 nightly at 8:30, except Mondays. Ticket information is obtainable from "The Stephen Foster Story," P.O. Box D, Bardstown, KY. 40004, phone (502) 348-5971.

The Civil War is the theme of "Wilderness Road," which begins its season June 21 at Indian Fort Theater in Berea. The play uses elements of history to tell of the struggle of a mountain community caught in the war. It plays nightly at 8:30, except Sundays, through August 31. Ticket information may be obtained by writing Ross Arnold, Wilderness Road Drama, CPO 2255, Berea, KY 40404, or by phoning (606) 986-9331.

"Little Shepherd" runs through August 30, on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. For ticket information, write Little Shepherd Arts and Crafts, P.O. Box 7, Carcassone, KY 41806, or phone (606) 633-7962.

"The Legend of Daniel Boone," playing in Old Fort Harrod State Park Amphitheater in Harrodsburg, combines legend with history to paint a picture of the great Kentucky frontiersman who, with other settlers, established Fort Harrod and Boonesborough. The play starts June 21 to run through Aug. 30, 8:30 nightly except Sundays. Information about tickets may be obtained from "The Legend of Daniel Boone," P.O. News briefly

Wendy Brown is tennis champ

Wendy Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Brown of Lexington and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Snelling of Carlisle, was part of the winning doubles team at the Lexington regional high school tennis meet last weekend.

Wendy, 15, a sophomore at Tates Creek High School, teamed up with Susan Sloane, a nine-year-old who raised some eyebrows at the tourney.

At 9, Miss Sloane may be the youngest player in the state tournament in history but she and Wendy dispatched two Franklin County players in the regional finals 7-5, 3-6, 6-0. One of the Franklin County players was a starter on the state champion runner-up girls basketball team and the other was the first reserve on that team.

Wendy and Susan will compete in the state tournament this weekend in Lexington. Last weekend's regional finals were played in Lexington. Wendy and Susan started their finals match at the University of Kentucky and then moved to the Lexington Tennis Club because of rain.

But that was all right with the two Tates Creekers, who learned the game at the Lexington Tennis Club. The two Franklin County girls had never played indoors before.

Wendy and Susan were the subject of an article in Sunday's Lexington Herald-Leader after their win. In it, Wendy was praised by her coach, "Wendy's got a great attitude," he was quoted as saying. "She keeps Susan fired up a lot."

Wendy played No. 1 singles for Tates Creek during the regular season while Susan played No. 3. In doubles, they were defeated in eight matches.

Susan also had some praise for her partner. "I like singles better," she said, "but I like to have Wendy for a partner. She's good."

The state tennis tournament is May 30-31 in Lexington.

Chamber elects officers

The Carlisle-Nicholas County Chamber of Commerce has announced a new slate of officers and awarded a $200 scholarship to a graduating Nicholas County High School student.

Winner of this year's scholarship is Grant Mathes, who plans to major in agri-business.

The new officers are John Burke, president; Bobby Smith, vice-president; Rob Hester, secretary and Bill Donovan, treasurer.

The chamber has a membership meeting scheduled for Thursday, June 5 at 3 p.m. It will be held at Evan's Restaurant on Main Street in Carlisle.

A dinner at Carnico Country Club is also planned for June 26. Tickets will be $6.50 each and more information about this dinner will be available after the June 5 meeting.

Open house

Cookies and punch were on the menu last Thursday when the Nicholas County Senior Citizens Center celebrated its third anniversary with an open house. The open house was also commemorating Older Americans Month, which was proclaimed in May. — Mercury photo.

Summer food program set

Community Action Lexington-Fayette-Nicholas County, Inc. (CALF) will sponsor a summer feeding program at the Nicholas County Recreation Park.

The program will begin June 2 and all children, regardless of race, color, handicap or national origin, are invited. There will be no charges for the meals and any person age 18 and under is eligible to participate.

There will also be planned recreation activities at the site in addition to the food service.

Pryor attends Demo meeting

Newly elected Nicholas County Democratic Chairman Paul Pryor of Carlisle was among those who recently attended a County Chairman meeting in Frankfort at Kentucky Democratic Headquarters. Governor John Y. Brown Jr. took the opportunity to outline to the Chairmen his goals and aspirations as they relate to the Kentucky Democratic Party. Brown told the group "... at the end of my term I want to see Democrats have the strongest and most united Democratic organization in the country."

Kentucky Democratic Party Chairman Bob Cobb stressed to the group a need for change in the practice of politics in the 80's.

This recession is depression
Nobel economist tells school

By Daniel G. Shaw

Government spokesmen call it "recession." But to Dr. Wassily Leontief, the current U.S. economic crunch is more characteristic of "depression."

"I think our government did its best to produce a depression, because it decided the only way it could fight increasing prices is to reduce production," said the internationally renowned economist and Nobel Prize winner prior to delivering the May 11 University of Louisville commencement address, "The Present State of Economic Science."

"This idea is not the most rational one, but this is what our government is doing; it is reducing the output of goods and reducing employment in order to cut prices. Essentially, this means reducing supply, and I think they are succeeding at it."

Dr. Leontief noted that what we are seeing today is a reversal of traditional economic theory which states that as the supply of goods diminishes, the demand for them becomes greater and their costs increase.

"Inflation is a very special problem," observed Dr. Leontief, the creator of the input-output system which revolutionized economic research and planning, "and the way this nation is handling it may not be the best way. I think that if you take a look at the other nations who have experienced inflation and have handled it successfully — countries like West Germany, Austria and Norway — you'll observe a totally different relationship between their trade unions and businesses. These relationships are far better than those found in the U.S.

Raises passed to consumer

"My feeling is that the balance between increased prices and production is simply due to the fact that American laborers ask management for higher wages, and management responds accordingly by increasing their salaries. In turn, businesses pass the increases along to the consumer. And this process goes on and on. The people in this country who are not in the game (individuals who do not belong to either labor or management) and the people on the sidelines who receive pensions are hurt by it. I think the only way in which we can cope with inflation is to change our social structure. In this case, it means a change in labor and business."

American economic problems, he added, are affecting the rest of the world.

The United States still produces one-third — possibly one-fourth — of all goods manufactured and consumed in the world, said the former director of the Harvard Economic Research Project on the Structure of the American Economy. And the United States is still the biggest trading nation in the world. "Russia, of course, is second in world production. But the Russians always have pursued the policy of retaining self-sufficiency, so they do not play as great a role and do not depend to such an extent on the rest of the world as the United States does.

"Obviously, we have a depression where other countries will lose their markets in the U.S. and, consequently, we will all experience difficulties. But as time goes on, other countries will attempt to become more independent from us. And so, from this point of view, we will affect their development, but in the long run we will be one of the effacing nations. We will not be as much of a 'top dog' as we already have learned with the practical experience of recent years."

England has much the same troubles as the United States, Dr. Leontief pointed out. "And look what's happened to England. I'm afraid we are slowly moving into the path that England took rather than moving into the path that West Germany followed."

West German model

Dr. Leontief frequently referred to West Germany — a nation which successfully battled inflation. Its labor-management structure, he pointed out, is different from that found in the United States.

"Very few people realize that in West Germany, 50 percent of the persons who sit on the boards of directors of every major corporation are elected by the workers. Arguments, of course, still arise between labor and management. But the laborers have the satisfaction of knowing that, at least, the issues could are taken into account in the workings of the company — in the investment requirements, and in the planning and looking ahead. We don't have anything like this in the United States."

The 1973 Nobel laureate — often called "The Apostle of Planning" — believes that the United States could have avoided its present economic dilemma had government or business looked ahead 30 years ago using modern economic analysis. But neither group took the initiative. Our steel and automobile industries wouldn't have been in trouble today if they (government or business) had taken preventative measures. U.S. corporations cannot afford to look ahead more than three or four years," Dr. Leontief said. "I think that the natural organization to do this is government."

What is in store for the United States

In Dr. Leontief's economic forecast:

"Much of what will happen to the nation's economy will depend on what the government, the political parties and the Congress will do," he predicted.

"The system might have to go through the wringer. I hope that after this happens we can make some sense (out of economics) and begin to organize our economy in a slightly more rational way."
