REPLICA OF CAPTAIN WOODS' SERVICE RECORD FROM THE ARMY

Citation Lieutenant Samuel Woodfill United States Army AEF

This story of the splendid fight for which he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor is told in the official citation as follows: By direction of the President under the provisions of the Congress approved July 9, 1918, the Congressional Medal of Honor has been awarded in the name of Congress, to the following named officer for the act of gallantry set after his name.

Following is General John J. Pershing's recommendation, which was approved: First Lieutenant Woodfill 40th Infantry AEF for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in action with the enemy at Cuneil, France, October 12, 1918. While Lieutenant Woodfill was leading his company against the enemy's line, he came under heavy machine gun fire, which threatened to hold up the advance. Followed by two soldiers at twenty-five yards this officer went out ahead of his first line toward a machine gun nest and worked his way around its flank, leaving the two soldiers in front. When he got within ten yards of the gun it ceased firing and four of the enemy appeared, three of whom were shot by Woodfill, the fourth an officer, rushed at Lieutenant Woodfill, who attempted to club the officer with his rifle. After a hand-to-hand struggle Lieutenant Woodfill killed the officer with his pistol. His company then continued to advance until shortly afterwards another machine gun nest was encountered. Calling on his men to follow, Lieutenant Woodfill rushed ahead of his line in the face of heavy fire from the nest and when several of the enemy appeared above the nest he shot them, capturing three other members of the crew and silencing the guns. A few minutes later this officer, for the third time, demonstrated conspicuous daring by charging another machine gun position, killing five men in one machine gun pit with his rifle. He then drew his revolver and started to jump into the pit when two other enemies only a few yards away turned their guns on him. Failing to kill them with his revolver, he grabbed a pick lying nearby and killed both of them. He inspired by the exceptional courage displayed by this officer, his men pressed on to their objective under severe shell and machine gun fire.

Captain Woodfill came through this thrilling experience unharmed, except that he suffered a slight shrapnel wound and was gassed. For his services during The World War Captain Woodfill was awarded, besides the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the Cross De Guerre, and several Allied Nations' decorations.

General John J. Pershing, former Commander of the AEF, appointed a committee of former combat Army and Navy officers in 1919 to select one hundred top heroes of the war, and from that group selected the greatest hero of the war. Captain Samuel Woodfill was declared to be the greatest hero of the war.

Captain Woodfill served several years in the 10th U.S. Infantry at Fort Thomas, Kentucky before and after the WWI. He retired from the Regulars in 1922. He was recalled to active duty as a Major and was sworn in by Captain Roy L. Shannon, Commanding Officer of the Regular Army Recruiting Service at Fort Thomas, Kentucky August 10, 1942. Major Woodfill was born in 1883. He died in 1951 and was buried in Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, D.C.

This is the third in a series of Energy Conservation programs offered this fall by Mayville Community College. Other programs were the Chain Saw and Wood Stove Exhibit held in September and a program concerned with cautions in woodburning as an alternative energy source presented in October. These energy forums have been jointly sponsored by Mayville Community College, Murray State University, and the Kentucky Department of Energy.

Area homeowners are encouraged to visit this exhibit to see and compare different products and methods of conserving energy in the home. Items on display will be set up in the main lobby at the college. Admission is free of charge.

'Operation Toybox'

Although most adults never think of small parts, sharp edges or lead-based paint when shopping for Christmas toys, the Department for Human Resources' "Operation Toybox" has started unannounced inspections of retail toy outlets around the state to assure toys on their shelves are free of those and other potential safety hazards.

Inspectors from the Department's consumer product safety branch will visit 150 stores across the state between now and Christmas for spot inspections of toys and other products intended for use by children.

One-third of all injuries to children are toy-related, he said.

In 1979 approximately 9,540 toy-related injuries were treated in hospital emergency rooms in Kentucky.

For more information on toy safety or to report an unsafe toy contact the Department for Human Resources Consumer Product Safety Branch, 275 East Main, Frankfort, Ky. The telephone number is (502) 564-3122.

Toys will be inspected for sharp edges and points and small parts that could be broken loose from the toy and swallowed. Samples of painted toys will be collected to check for lead content in the paint, according to branch manager Eddie Moore.

In addition, electrical toys will be checked for proper labeling and independent testing laboratory logos. Federal consumer safety guidelines state electrically operated toys intended for children under eight must not have a heating element.

Toys that have been banned or are subject to mandatory or voluntary recall by the Federal Consumer Product Safety Commission since the state's last inspection may still be on some shelves, Moore said. Inspectors will remove them.

"The consumer has an important voice in toy safety. If someone buys a toy and it proves to be a health hazard, we can check it out if they bring it to our attention," Moore said.

Moore emphasized that the branch can't be responsible for toys that do not work properly and are poorly made. The branch can intervene if a defect in a toy proves to be a hazard to public safety.

"The toy industry had an estimated $1 billion in sales last year. Toys are tokens of affection and we want to see that they don't cause injury or pain," Moore said.

70% of the energy in the primary fuel source is used to power generators in the production of electric current and another 2% in transporting the current over lines to the customer, while 15.5% of the primary energy source is used in producing, storing, and transporting propane gas, giving it an 84.5 efficiency rating compared to a 28% efficiency rating for electric. The consumer pays for the total cost of both sources of power, but gets 72% of what he is paying for in buying electric. Gas is best by every test.
