Telephone use easy unless you're deaf

In Kentucky, South Central Bell is working closely with deaf people to meet their special telecommunications needs. "We don't realize what a severe handicap one has when he or she is unable to use the telephone," said Faye Best, state coordinator, Services for the Deaf, Bureau of Rehabilitation Services in Danville. A deaf person could drive for miles to call friends and run errands only to find no one at the store closed. With the help of a hearing person, he or she can use the telephone but must sacrifice privacy, said Ms. Best.

Being able to use the telephone opens up a whole new world, said Ms. Best. Kentucky are fortunate to have this unique package of special services:

A portable telecommunications device for the deaf (TDD) that can be coupled easily to a standard telephone to send and receive messages. — a state directory of TDD users; — discounts on in-state long distance rates; — 24-hour assistance for placing specialized calls including personal person, third-number billed, credit card and for directory assistance.

The portable TDD weighs less than four pounds and has a typewriter-like keyboard. Customers who qualify are eligible for a reduced rate — essentially at the company's cost — of $22.80 per month. Without the device, the monthly charge is $29.50. The device costs about $300. TDD users from around the state, 10 includes police and fire emergency numbers, government listings and local government office reference.

To obtain copies of the directory, apply for reduced portable TDD rates, or reduce in-state long distance rates, contact the local South Central Bell business office. TDD users can call Bell Customer Assistance Bureau by dialing toll free 1-800-754-0068. There are special representative visits to TDD to record and respond to customer inquiries.

For 24-hour help in placing special calls, TDD users can dial toll free 1-800-855-1155. Calls from the 506 area code are handled through Boston, one of four regional centers in the country.

As uncommon as they are, natural gas leaks have some common signs.
Can you recognize them?

Columbia Gas keeps close watch on its pipelines and facilities to assure safe operation. And, although leaks are uncommon, they sometimes do occur. We feel it important that you know how to recognize a leak and what to do if you should spot one.

Common signs include a smell of gas, inside or outside; a hissing noise; blowing dirt; or bubbling water over a submerged pipe. In or around your home or building, if you smell gas, first check to see if a pilot light or burner may be out. If not, and you still sense a leak, call us. Be aware the source of a gas odor could be external — gas from service lines or street mains — that could migrate into your premises through walls or drain lines.

If the odor is strong, open doors and windows. Shut off gas appliances valves or meter valve. Don't use matches, electric switches or appliances. Leave the house and call Columbia Gas from nearby and stay there until a Columbia representative arrives.

If you are outside in an open area, eliminate, if possible, potential sources of ignition and leave the area. Call Columbia Gas from another location. We're proud that calls reporting leaks are few. But Columbia wants you to make them, even if you only suspect a leak.

In every case, Columbia Gas will send someone immediately to make a thorough check. Columbia Gas is concerned about safety. And with your cooperation, we'll keep your natural gas service efficient and dependable.
