Kay's Kitchen

By Kay Fisher

This is a continuation of last week's column on an easy way to keep cookies hot and crisp. Take the basic cookie mix and you can even have delicious frosted brownies.

DOUBLE FROSTED LITTLE BROWNIES
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 cups granulated cookie mix
1/2 cup margarine
1/4 cup finely chopped nuts
1 cup soft confectioners 10-X powdered sugar
Few drops milk

Melt chocolate squares (1 sq. each) in top of double boiler over hot water; remove and cool. Beat in vanilla, cookie mix and eggs until well blended. Stir in nuts. Put into greased 8-inch square pan. Bake in 350 degree F. oven for about 20 minutes. Cool in pan on rack. Mix confectioners sugar and milk. Spread on top of brownies. Let stand until set. Melt chocolate bits over hot water; stir in oil. Spread over frosting (or add oil and vanilla chocolate over white icing). Let set. Cut into 14-by-2-inch bars. Store airtight. Makes about 3 dozen.

ALMOND SHORT BREAD
3 cups cookie mix
1/2 cup ground blanched almonds
Whole chocolate squares (1 sq. each) in top of double boiler over hot water; remove and cool. Beat in vanilla, cookie mix and eggs until well blended. Stir in nuts. Put into greased 8-inch square pan. Bake in 350 degree F. oven for about 20 minutes. Cool in pan on rack. Mix confectioners sugar and milk. Spread on top of brownies. Let stand until set. Melt chocolate bits over hot water; stir in oil. Spread over frosting (or add oil and vanilla chocolate over white icing). Let set. Cut into 14-by-2-inch bars. Store airtight. Makes about 3 dozen.

BLENDED COOKIE MIX
Blend cookie mix, ground almonds and whole chocolate squares in a food processor or blender. Store in airtight container. Use in place of regular cookie mix. Makes 4 dozen cookies.

CHOCOLATE-MINT ROUNDS
Prepare Basic Refrigerator Cookie Dough. Add 1/2 cup cream peanut butter with the sugar and the vanilla. Spread on top of 2-inch round rolls. Roll in 1/4 cup chest nuts. Proceed as for basic cookie. Makes 4 dozen cookies.

Hourly wages up 6.9%

While the average hourly earnings have risen 6.9 percent from May 1979 to May 1980, the average weekly earnings only increased 3.4 percent for Kentucky manufacturing workers, according to the Department for Human Resources statistics. Robert MacDonald, the department's chief labor market analyst explained that even though hourly wages are up in the state, the workers' time on the job is reduced, thus causing the weekly earnings to be down.

Schools receive funds

LEXINGTON — Kentucky schools and hospitals have been awarded nearly $1 million for energy saving measures through an energy conservation program administered by the Kentucky Department of Energy. The Kentucky Institutional Grants Program is funded by the U.S. Department of Energy on a 90-10 matching basis to encourage energy awareness at the local level.

Energy conservation measures eligible for the grants include installing alarm windows and doors and new boilers or retrofits for existing ones. "Energy management systems," which are computerized systems that automatically control the heating and cooling plants in a building, also qualify for energy grants.

Twelve schools and hospitals have already received awards this year and another 41 have been recommended for funding, said Damon Harrison, state energy coordinator. The Bureau of Energy Conservation and Distribution, which administers the program, will have the opportunity to apply for more of these funds when they are made available during the next year.

"Approximately $3 million is avail-

Dept. of Human Resources study Health programs

FRANKFORT — Kentucky's Medicaid program is being studied by the Department for Human Resources in an effort to reduce the growth rate and lower costs.

Human Resources Secretary Dr. Grady Shumbo, app. recently before the Interim Joint Committee on Health and Welfare, listed three areas to be studied by his department.

— Reduction of the scope of the services under the Medicaid program.

— Reduce Medicaid eligibles.

— Improve various cost containment features.

Shumbo said Medicaid payments were growing at an annual rate of 30 percent to 22 percent and would cost $29 million in the coming year. Kentucky provides 33 percent of the cost with the federal government paying the balance.

Medicaid, which aids persons with low or no income, is divided into two basic groups: the categorically eligible and the medically needy.

The categorically eligible group makes up 40 percent, or the largest part of the Medicaid eligibles, and consists of those persons who are aged, blind or disabled. Also in the categorically eligible group are people age 65 and over who meet the definition of the Social Security criteria for disability and the Aid to Families with Dependent Children group.

The medically needy, which account for 18 percent, include persons 65 and over whose income is large to meet the categorically eligible group. Others comprising this group include the blind and disabled who must only meet the same financial criteria, but must also meet the same definition of disability as the categorically eligible group.

Shumbo said a reduction in services to the medically needy group would cause undue hardship on those persons, most of whom are aged and disabled and a majority of which are in long term care facilities.

This group, while representing only 18 percent of the total eligible group, represents 40 percent of the total Medicaid budget.

Cuts in other areas of this program would involve less than 3.000 recipients and result in only moderate savings, he said.

Shumbo said that the area of cost containment will have the least impact on the care available to eligible individuals as well as supporting, to a major extent, the provision of these services by the different facilities and medical providers.

Cost containment features, on the other hand, would allow the continuation of services, but would result in lower cost increases and change the emphasis on the program. He said to discourage further development or expansion in the long term care facilities, he said.

Proposals included: — alternate delivery systems, would shift some services from long term facilities to home care and primary care clinics; — alternate methods of reimbursement, may take the form of various limitations on costs and incentives designed to encourage more efficient delivery of services as well as cost sharing by Medicaid patients; — planning and regulations, already underway in the department to provide for close coordination of the health care planning mechanism with the resources and funding limits of major third party payers such as the Medicaid program, and to assist individuals requiring long term care with a list of facilities providing maximum benefit for cost of care; — copayments, where a participant in the program shares the cost of some or all services.

Shumbo said action on legislation passed by the 1980 General Assembly concerning equal pay for doctors regardless of what part of the state they practice in, was under study by federal health officials. Shumbo did not expect a response before next summer.

Advisory Council met Sept. 15 Title I

The Nicholas County Schools Title I Parent's Advisory Council met at the Nicholas County Board of Education on Wednesday, Sept. 15. Those present were John Dale, P.A.C. chairperson; Lee Rose, P.A.C. member; and Bill Guthrie, Title I Coordinator.

The implementation of the 1980-81 Title I program was discussed by Mr. Guthrie. This year Title I reading instruction will be available to any student in grades one through twelve and Title I math instruction will be available to any student in grades one through eight.
