CATS STILL LOOKING FOR QUARTERBACK

LEXINGTON — Spring football practice ends at the University of Kentucky this weekend and Fran Curci is still looking for a starting quarterback. It's a three-way race among Terry Henry, Randy Jenkins and Tom Boyle. Curci says Henry and Jenkins, because of their experience, are slightly ahead of Boyle right now.

"A number one quarterback hasn't surfaced yet," Curci says. "We really have to make a decision as to what offense we're going to use next season.

"We've never had the luxury around here of saying we're going to run the wishbone offense then go out and recruit people who can run the wishbone. We have to tailor the offense to suit the people we have."

Curci says the two main contenders for the starting quarterback job are very different types of players.

"Terry Henry is an all-purpose quarterback. He's a tough guy who's really a running back playing quarterback.

"Terry is a mini Derrick Ramsey. He's really worked hard on his passing this spring but he's got to throw the ball better than he did last year. Throwing has really come back in the college game and we'd like to throw the ball a little more than we have in the past."

Randy Jenkins is strong in the passing game.

"Randy does everything very well," says Curci. "He's not as strong as Terry but he runs the ball fairly well. He can't take the physical beating that Terry can take but Randy throws the ball pretty well. He completed around 48 percent of his passes last year, and with a couple of years experience I think he's become a very efficient quarterback."

Curci doesn't expect to have settled on a number one quarterback when spring practice ends with the Blue-White game this Saturday night. He says he and his staff must make the decision during the summer.

"We've filmed every practice this spring," he says. "We've even talked about using two types of offense but I think that's wishful thinking. We've got to decide on a quarterback then decide on what offense we're going to use. We'll study the films all summer and by August we will have made that decision."

It is a decision that will affect the Kentucky football team for 11 weeks this fall.
