

Game room Carlisle's newest business venture

Avoid the clanging and banging of pinball machines and electronic invaders from outer space, Carlisle's newest business opened its doors a couple of weeks ago.

The Game Room, Marshall and Mary Cox's amusement arcade, is now open for business in the building formerly occupied by the A&S office. Mrs. Cox says that The Game Room seeks to "cater to school kids of all ages." And with seven pinball machines, five electronic games, a foosball table and pool table, they think they are well prepared for that task.

During the first couple of weeks in business, Mrs. Cox says that "the kids around here have really been nice." While nothing definite has been decided, tentative plans for the future include offering prizes for the top score on various machines, reserving the room for church youth organizations, and perhaps reserving a time when only children under 12 will be allowed to use the facility.

When school returns to regular session next week, The Game Room will open for business around the time classes are dismissed for the day, Mrs. Cox said. That it should remain open until midnight on weekends, but no later than 11 p.m. on weekdays.

Herald a Journalism major at Morehead State University, Mrs. Cox said, "We don't want to interfere with their studies."

At the present time, the facility is only using half of the building's available space and Mrs. Cox said that if things went well enough, there was plenty of room for expansion and addition of new games.

Experimental season set

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has approved an experimental five-day September duck season for Kentucky, Fish and Wildlife Department Commissioner Carl E. Kays announced last week.

During the Sept. 8-13 season, hunters will be allowed a daily bag of four ducks, but only one of the four can be a species other than teal or wood ducks.

Hunters participating in this early season hunt must have a special permit, which is for sport purposes and includes a post-paid card for the hunter to report harvest and hunting information.

This September season will give Kentucky hunters an opportunity to harvest Kentucky-produced wood ducks, Kays said. Permitting one duck other than teal or wood ducks in the daily bag limit will allow hunters to make a mistake in on-the-wing identification and be in violation of the law, according to Kays.

For personalized plates apply now

Kentuckians who want a personalized license plate for the first time or as a renewal should apply now. Kentucky Department of Transportation officials said.

The deadline for submitting applications for personalized plates is Sept. 1. Applications can be obtained from any local county clerk's office or by calling or writing the division of motor vehicle licensing in Frankfort.

In an economy move, the state transportation department did not send out renewal notices in July, as it has done in the past. Applications for the following year are now accepted as soon as the new plates are distributed each November.

Initial cost of the personalized license plate is $25, and an additional $12.50 registration fee is charged when the plate is picked up.

More than 1,000 Kentuckians bought the plates last year. The creative messages varied from CATFAN, UNCLEA and BROTHER TO TRY GOOD, THE WHO and HAZARD.

Kentuckians are not by the creativity of the applicant, said John Trager with motor vehicle licensing. The plates "can't offend public decency," and they "can't conflict with the numbering and lettering systems already used by the state," he said. Regular Kentucky plates consist of three-letter, three-number combinations.

When mailing in an application, several choices for the messages should be included, Trager said. "There is always a rush for certain combinations like 'GO CATS,'" he explained.

The person who had the plate with a particular message the year before has

In another frame, unscrupled girls were prohibited by law from wearing pants. Instead, the pants were worn by young men, who played the pants in tiny balls which, hanging from their ears, tinkled gently.

Food prices jump in August

Retail food prices in Kentucky jumped 2.3 per cent during August, according to Kentucky Farm Bureau's latest marketbasket survey.

A group of 40 selected food items cost an average of $29.27 this month, up from $28.60 in July. August was the third month in a row that prices have increased, and the hike fell overall into some 6.9 per cent above August 1980 levels.

Price gainers outnumbered decliners 26 to 14 on the latest marketbasket tally sheet. Among the items showing sizable hikes were beef and pork (nine of ten cuts), apples and lettuce. On the down side, all three cuts of poultry dropped, as did potatoes.

Lettuce, which averaged 86 cents a head statewide, was up 10 cents over last month and stood at the highest level in the 36-month history of the Farm Bureau survey. Potatoes, on the other hand, were down 11 cents per 10-pound bag, and were at their lowest since February.

Volunteer members of Kentucky Farm Bureau Women conducted the August canvassing in 20 Kentucky communities. Month-end reported the lowest local marketbasket average while Georgetown was high.

Those local averages were: Morehead, 54.54; Greensburg and Tompkinsville, 54.61; Scottsville, 54.76; Elizabethtown, 56.92; Glasgow, 57.60; Hopkinsville, 57.77; Middlesboro, 57.96; Owensboro, 58.28; Greensburg, 58.41; Cynthiana, 58.87; Seavee, 58.94; Covington, 59.13.

Shelbyville, 59.89; Shepherdsville, 59.89; Alexandria, 59.74; Stanford, 59.90; London, 61.80; Lexington, 61.77; Henderson, 61.26; Murray, 61.71; Jackson, 61.87; Paducah, 63.07; Frankfort, 63.20; Louisville, 63.47; and Georgetown, 63.32.

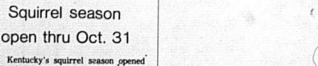

Farm prices during the period were a mixed bag, according to the most recent report by the Kentucky Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. Kentucky farmers were paid more for their soybeans, hogs and cattle than they were a month earlier, but earned lower prices for corn, wheat and feeder calves.

Overall, USDA's index of farm prices declined 7 of 11 per cent during the month, while farm costs were unchanged. The new report listed farm prices at 4.4 per cent higher than a year ago, while farm costs were 8.4 per cent higher for the period.

Squirrel season open thru Oct. 31

Kentucky's squirrel season opened Sunday and will continue for the state's hunters through Oct. 31.

The squirrel limit is six daily, with 12 in possession after two or more days hunting.
