Fiscal Court gives nod to Lexington firm

The Blue Grass Medical Services got a conditional nod from the fiscal court for a $100,000 bond issue to purchase a new ambulance for the county during last Wednesday's regular session court meeting.

County Judge Cassius Reese Smoot told the court of an updated proposal by the Blue Grass Medical Services, whereby he could provide the service for an $80,000 subsidy if the court would purchase and lease to him the new ambulance currently used by the local fire-fighters.

The vehicle will cost a total of $110,000, and the county will retain ownership of the vehicle.

Mrs. Margaret Hunter appeared before the court and said that she would like to give the court some statistics to consider in making the decision. Mrs. Hunter said that there are 100 homes in the county with females as large majority of these are widows.

Hunter also said that there are 1,027 persons in the county on social security of those, 180 are receiving $81. She added that over 20 percent of the county's population is currently living below the federal poverty line.

Robert Hunter, local hospital administrator, asked the court to consider the "tag line" between the local hospital and the county, and the use of any replacement service. Judge Smoot told Hunter that Cooney had the right to be considered for the purchase of the ambulance.

Hunter also said that he had checked with HCS's competition in Lexington, and that Cooney offered the lowest price for HCS's ambulance. He also said that Cooney offered a 10 percent charge for the local road and 400 for an out-of-county road for a pickup fee. He then said $120 per month for maintenance plus equipment charges and charges for waiting time.

Leslie Sauls pointed out to the court that Cooney had left open the possibility of needing an additional ambulance in a couple of years. He also pointed out that Judge Smoot had said that the local hospital would not be able to pay the cost to come up with $110,000 for a new ambulance. He said that the $100,000 involved in the current proposal would come from.

Judge Smoot said Sauls that the contract would only be for one year and that after that time the situation would be re-evaluated. He said that the $100,000, he said the court would have to see what the council could offer by 1973.

In discussing the proposal offered by Blue Hill's of the center, and the county, County Attorney Joseph H. Conley told the court that in order to purchase the vehicle, the county would have to provide most of the standard specifications as well as the Better Business Bureau, Bluegrass AED, and his bank, and that all reports were favorable.

Robert Hunter suggested that a possible source of revenue from the city could be the money collected from parking meters. Hunter brought up the point that "they were going to get rid of them at one time, so they must not have needed the money too badly."

Hunter also said that he has 1,027 persons in the county on social security of those, 180 are receiving $81. He added that over 20 percent of the county's population is currently living below the federal poverty line.

County Judge Cassius Reese Smoot

Approved ordered and recorded $17,272.80 in school coupons from 1972 bonds, and $875 in coupons for 1970 bonds, and he said that the county would have to see what the council could offer by 1973.

—Designated the Senior Citizens Center, the Community Center, and the courthouse as recipients of the three free cable outlets provided them by the county.

—Decided to check into getting a "volunteer area" sign for Morning Glory.

—Hearled from Magistrate Melvin Fryman that when the revenue sharing hearing takes on the court should consider getting some transportation for the workers at the county road department. Fryman said that the transportation they currently have is "worn out."

—They have to get out and travel the roads at all hours of the night," he said, "it is too far to get back to the county barn."

—Discussed the possibility of building the Home Relief Fund up at the revenue sharing hearing. County Attorney Conley said that the court must get some ground rules laid out for expenditures from that fund. It provides medical care to indigents in the county.

—Hearled from Road Superintendent John Ector that a dump truck at the county farm needs a rebuilt back because of a bad crankshaft. The back is expected to cost around $700.

Carlisle's Alma Curtis, now vice president of manufacturing at Kentucky Textiles, is the subject of a cover story for the December issue of "Southern Gleanings," a magazine for the textile industry.

The article, titled "Alma Curtis: From the Swath to Kentucky Textiles," traces Mrs. Curtis' career from her early days as a sewing machine operator with Giffin Manufacturing, to her work with the Blue Grass Industries, to her current position with the Farm Plan.

Mrs. Curtis and her husband Sam reside at 258 Kennedy Heights.

County's oldest resident, Annabel Gill, dies just days before 104th birthday

Nicholas County's oldest resident passed last Monday at the Nicholas County Hospital. She was Miss Annabel Gill of Boone, Moorefield. She was 103 years old.

Miss Gill was honored last year on her 103rd birthday when she was presented with a certificate by the part-time people will be paid somewhere in the neighborhood of $5 per year in the county, and $100 for runs to Lexington.

Cooney said "I'll know in four months if there's going to be a problem" in continuing the service of a contractual clause he would open his books to anyone who gave him the money. He said he would open his books to anyone who gave him the money. He said he would open his books to anyone who gave him the money.

She had the old general goods store in Milltown for 20 years. In an interview with Mercury staffer Janie Dunson last year, Miss Gill recalled her years running the general store.

Her business, as all county general stores, was on a year-to-year credit basis. When the farmers in that section sold their tobacco, they could pay the year's account they had made.

Miss Gill told Cooney about the disastrous tobacco crop of 1932, when several families could not meet their debts. She simply credited them their year's account, and went on about her business.

In an earlier interview on her 100th birthday back in 1977, Miss Gill told Mercury that the highlight of her many years lay in "being good to people. I never allowed anyone to suffer if I had anything."

Miss Gill had been living with the Subb Livingsford family for the past five years.

Ellisville Homemakers meet with Mrs. Anderson

The Ellisville Homemakers met Dec. 7 at the home of Mrs. Ruth Anderson. There were 18 members, one visitor, Mrs. Dorothy Sunday, and Mrs. Margie Wilson present. Roll call was answered by "my most memorable Christmas" of gifts.

The business meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Ruth Anderson. Catherine Wells gave the devotional.

After lunch a Christmas program "The Magic of Christmas" was led by Mrs. Thelma Standfield. Seven members participated in the readings and everyone sang Christmas carols. There was a Christmas auction and exchange of gifts.

Next meeting will be Jan. 6 at the home of Mrs. Jean Jones.
