Chrismon Tree

If you thought this was a picture of a Christmas tree, you were only half right. It is a Chrismon tree. A Chrismon tree (derived from the words Christ and Monogram) is adorned with symbols commemorating Christ in the colors of white and gold — white, the liturgical color for Christmas, and gold for the majesty and glory. This Chrismon tree was fashioned by the women of the Carlisle Methodist Church. — Mercury photo.

'Goings-on' at Senior Citizens Center

Can you believe how time flies? We've gone clear through Thanksgiving and before we know it the little man with the white beard and the Ho-Ho-Ho will have been here and gone and we will find ourselves smack into a brand new year.

We would like to thank Bill Snapp and his music makers for their delightful music. They are welcome back any time they want to come. We have three important dates to remember this month. On the 16th after lunch we will go to Shirley Vice's new home. She hasn't been in it very long, so you might say this will be an old fashioned "house warming."

The 21st we will have our own special Christmas party with a tree and an exchange of gifts, and on the 23rd our guests will be the Fiscal Court, the City Council and the ministers who come on Wednesday and their wives. I do hope they will all be in "good voice," because we will be singing Christmas carols.

That about brings us to the end of December. In all of our fun and joy of being together at this particular season let's not forget those who are less fortunate than we are, those who are in hospitals or nursing homes or perhaps have had a death in the family — but most of all, let's not forget the true meaning of Christmas, for if one takes Christ out, there wouldn't be much left to celebrate. Have you ever stopped to think — if there had never been a Christmas there wouldn't be an Easter?

Now, we would like to wish you a very merry, merry and a happy, happy — Christmas and New Year that is.

If you're looking for news, we have it!

Minor accident on Main Street

A minor accident took place on Main Street Friday when a car driven by Allen L. Crawford, Route 4, Carlisle, slid into the rear of a car driven by Charles L. Wasson, Burlington, Iowa.

According to an accident report filed by Officer Jim Coy, both autos were headed west on Main Street, when Wasson stopped his car in preparation to make a right hand turn into the First National Bank lot. Crawford's 1972 Pontiac then slid on the wet pavement into the rear of Wasson's 1971 Chevrolet.

Coy's report said that there was "very little damage" to either vehicle, and no injuries were reported.

The accident occurred at 5:15 p.m.

Kentucky Business Scene

(c) 1981, Kentucky Business Ledger, Inc.

Just a few short months ago, numerous proposed gasohol projects dotted the Kentucky landscape. But because of high interest rates, a weak fuel alcohol market and the federal government's reticence to help fund the development of this form of alternate energy, many of these projects have fallen by the wayside.

According to the state Department of Energy, only seven projects remain under "serious development" in Kentucky while four additional ones are in the "planning stage."

One project surviving marketplace and financing strains is the Bardstown Fuel Alcohol Co., which has spent approximately $3.5 million converting the Willett Distilling Co. for ethanol production. (Ethanol is a high-grade alcohol distilled from corn and used to make gasohol. The end product is particularly suitable as an octane enhancer and a fuel extender.)

Bardstown Fuel Alcohol plans to begin operation before Christmas, producing 1.5 million gallons a year initially and five million gallons a year eventually.

"Of course, that's hardly a drop in the bucket when you consider the whole energy picture, but I honestly believe we're headed in the right direction here," said company president Fred Lindsey. "We're pioneering in what has to be done in this country. And that is developing alternative fuel sources to petroleum."

Mr. Lindsey said he is convinced that another oil embargo would be devastating to the U.S. "In the meantime, it's unreasonable to think the oil companies are going to come up with alternative products that will compete against themselves," he said. "But the major oil companies' involvement in fuel alcohol tells me we're in the right business."

Bardstown Fuel Alcohol's distilling process will net a number of by-products, in addition to ethanol, its prime commodity. One by-product is carbon dioxide gas, which will be sold to soft drink bottlers. Wet distiller's grain will be sold to local dairy farmers.

The plant will use about 1,800 bushels of corn daily, 330 days a year, a fact warmly acknowledged by farmers seeking new markets for their grain.

Another forerunner in the industry is the Kentucky Agricultural Energy Corp. plant near Franklin. The plant, spearheaded by Chevron U.S.A. and the family of Robert Wade, former president of the Kentucky Farm Bureau, is expected to start operations in about a year. The $68 million facility will turn out up to 21 million gallons of fuel alcohol annually.

"With the price of petroleum rising, alcohol as an octane enhancer and a fuel extender will be viable and economic," said Jack Wade, KAEC senior vice president and president of the Kentucky Power Alcohol Association. But in the short term, Mr. Wade noted, gasohol promoters must deal with high interest rates, slow yield on investments and the difficult prospects of finding marketing sources.

The plant is being funded with a combination of federal loan guarantees and private investments. And KAEC is fortunate in that Chevron "has put us over the hump by tying down our supply for marketing," Mr. Wade said.

National Distillers' Hill and Hill Distillery in Louisville, largely inoperational since 1972, has been producing alcohol from grain for gasohol and other purposes since summer. But, according to Richard Tilghman, corporate relations vice president for the New York-based company, the gasohol market is "weak" and may remain so as long as there is a gasoline surplus.

Ethanol producers have the option to turn to the chemical or pharmaceutical industries to sell their products when they determine the gasohol market is not profitable enough.

State officials said a number of other projects have made sizable strides in their attempts to get established. They include Alco Chemicals, Carrollton; Alcohol Energy Corp., Madisonville; American Farmers Marketing Cooperative, Mayfield, and Vulcan-Cincinnati, Paducah.

The four considered still in the planning stage are Kenergy, Lebanon; North Central Gasohol Cooperative, Brandenburg; Transylvania Distilleries, Henderson, and X-Cel Corp., Cynthiana.

Kentucky stocks on the move last week: Market direction of the index of 35 Kentucky-based stocks was mixed. Largest gains: United Kentucky Bank (OTC), to 21¼ from 17¼; Thomas Industries (NYSE), to 17 from 16, and First National Bank (OTC), to 37¾ from 37½. Biggest losses: Humana (NYSE), to 33¾ from 35 5/8, and General Energy (OTC), to 38 from 40¼.
