

Kentucky's Elderhostels

Last year seven colleges and universities in Kentucky joined the ranks of 220 other campuses across the country in providing Elderhostel programs. Many classes in its second year are filling, and registration deadlines are only four to six weeks away. In groups of no more than 40, Elderhostel travelers together offer men and women for a week on campus with dormitory living, daily study and extracurricular activities. Two or three courses (Elderhostel is not a college-level class) are offered several times each day to substitute like What Makes Democracy Work, Appalachian History, All About Borsari, Arts in Appalachia, Kentucky Tragedy and Aquatic Biology.

In 1975, the University of New Hampshire began offering courses over 60 and their spouses on-campus classes, housing and meals at affordable prices. Following the housing tradition of traveling and learning, they called the program "Elderhostel." Special banquet costs are included in the committee fees. For more information about Elderhostel, interested persons can contact the college or university they might wish to attend or Dr. Alice Brown, state coordinator for the Kentucky program, agrees with Richmond, 1000 Commonwealth Blvd., Room 100, Louisville, KY 40203, (502) 222-1444.

PVA tests will be given Tuesday, Feb. 17

The State Department of Personnel will be assisting the Revenue Department this year by administering the qualifying examinations for county property valuation administrator candidates. Commissioner of Revenue Robert H. Alphin said the Personnel Department has been asked to administer the written tests because it "enjoys a statewide reputation for fairness, honesty and integrity." In the past, the Revenue Department administered the test. Because the department supervises the incumbent county property valuation administrators or PVAs, in that position, it was not considered impartial in administering the test. Alphin said, "The department wants the test to be administered in an atmosphere and under circumstances similar" to that provided other regulations for state employment, Alphin said. While no parity has ever been demanded, the commissioner said that administration of the exam by the Personnel Department should remove any questions about the fairness of the testing procedure. The test will be given Tuesday, Feb. 17, at one location in each of the state's seven Congressional Districts. PVAs will be elected in each of Kentucky's 120 counties this year. Prospective PVA candidates must pass the test in order for their names to appear on the May primary ballot, according to state law. Because of widespread interest in property assessments, the Department of Revenue estimates that as many as 1,000 people may take the test. The test will be given under procedures similar to those used by the Personnel Department in testing applicants for state jobs under the merit system. The tests will be sent in locked containers to test proctors hired by the Personnel Department. The proctor will give the tests to applicants and collect them at the end of the testing period. The proctor will then put the tests back in the locked container for return to the Department of Personnel in Frankfort. The Personnel Department will be responsible for grading the tests. The Revenue Department has prepared the written portion of the test which consists of true-false and multiple choice questions. The test score will account for 90 percent of the final grade. A brief oral exam, also required by law, will count for 10 percent of the final grade. It will be administered at the testing site by Department of Revenue employees under the supervision of the proctor. The tests will be given Feb. 17 at these sites in the following congressional districts: District 1 - Kesselbuhl Hall, Paducah Community College, 1 a.m. District 2 - Griss Hall, Western Kentucky University, Bowling Green, 10:30 p.m. District 3 - Houchens Building, Bellarmine Campus, University of Louisville, 10:30 p.m. District 4 - Business Education and Psychology Building, Northern Kentucky University, Highland Heights, 12:30 p.m. District 5 - Laurel County Vocational School, London, noon.

Conservation district news

By Wilmer Halverson
A U.S. Soil Conservation Service (SCS) spokesman has revealed Kentucky farmers saved an estimated $1.1 million worth of fuel during the last two years. Eddie Wood, the head of SCS in Kentucky, said, "A special county by county survey shows that energy conscious farmers increased their plantings acres in 1980 by almost 40 percent, but in contrast they increased their fuel saving efforts by an impressive 18 percent over the previous year." Wood pointed out, "The actual savings amounted to approximately 12 1/2 million gallons of diesel fuel - and is indicative of a developing trend in Kentucky towards renewed interest in conservation farming techniques." He added, "1980 was the first year that Kentucky farmers who use conservation planning techniques were the majority."
