Southern States sales volume up in first six months of year

Southern States Cooperative's sales volume for the first six months of the 1980-81 fiscal year showed a $46,500,000 increase, as compared to the same period last year.
This was reported by Floyd Bush of Lexington, a regional manager of the cooperative, to a regional board conference of local agricultural leaders and young farmers held at Morehead. Attending the session were Sadie E. Runey, manager; Board members Bobby Sexton, Franklin Jolly, Sam Reynolds; young farmers Frank Terrell and Steve Duncan, all of Carlisle. Also present was Mike Phillips, county agent.
Bush told the session that the cooperative's volume rose a net of $13,700,000 for the first half of the year as compared to $28,800,000 a year ago. Net savings before income taxes and equity income totaled $1,671,000 down $2,665,000 from last year. The reduction in savings from petroleum accounted for most of this decrease. Other factors were higher operating expenses, increased use of capital, and record high interest rates.
"Total feed volume of 27,000 tons for the period was about the same as last year's volume for the first half of the fiscal year; fertilizer volume was 200,000 tons, up 32,000 tons over a year ago; seed volume was $6,800,000, up $1,440,000, and farm supply volume was $34,407,000, up $252,000 over last year, while petroleum volume was $21,944,000, down 1.3 percent from a year ago. This decrease was primarily in gasoline which follows the national trend toward conservation and less consumption.
Grain marketing volume was 13,268,000 bushels, down from 13,427,000 bushels a year ago. This reduction was due to drought conditions in a large section of the cooperative's five-state territory, however, higher grain prices contributed to a dollar volume increase of $15,000,000 over last year.

Also appearing on the program were H.W. Bryan, director, Member Institutional Relations, and H.B. Mansueti, Retail Operations, members of the cooperative's two-man management team.
Mr. Bryan, who headed the team, discussed "The Future and View", forecast that during the next five years, because of a relatively unstable economic climate, the "agricultural economy" could be subject to continued cost-price squeeze. At the same time, farm production will be geared to a world market, and the industry of agriculture will have an increasingly important role in solving the nation's balance of payments problem.
The credit needs of farmers will continue to increase, he stated, increased mechanization and adoption of new technological techniques will require greater cash expenditures by farmers. At the same time, he said, the cost of credit will be recognized more and more as an essential cost of doing business.
The availability and cost of energy will also be a great concern to farmers in making production and marketing decisions. The farmers' cause the average size of the farms will increase.

Mr. Mansueti, the other team member, discussed a number of cooperative principles which are the primary factors that make cooperative unique among the other members of the business community. These are: open membership; democratic control; patronage refund; limited interest on capital; political and religious neutrality; cash trading and the promotion of education.

Kahn exhibition opens March 1

An exhibition of paintings and pastel drawings by Wolf Kahn opens Sunday, March 1, in the University of Kentucky Center for Contemporary Art.
The Kahn exhibition is sponsored by Ashland Oil, Inc., which has commissioned the German-born artist to come to Kentucky and make pastel drawings of the landscape.
Kahn will be guest lecturer at noon Friday, March 6, in Room 115 of the Whitehall Classroom Building. The lecture is part of a series sponsored by the UK department of art.
Later in the afternoon, there will be a reception for Kahn in the Center at 6 p.m. The public is invited to both events.
A native of Stuttgart, Germany, Kahn came to the U.S. in 1940 where he graduated from the New York High School of Music and Art. He was a student of Hans Hofmann from 1948-1951 and finished his studies at the University of Chicago.
He has traveled throughout the United States and was awarded both the Guggenheim Fellowship and a Fulbright Grant to study in Milan and Rome. For the past 10 summers he has lived and painted in Vermont.
Kahn's work is included in many major collections including the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Brooklyn Museum and the Jewish Museum, New York; the Hutton Museum of Fine Arts; University of California, Berkeley; and the Philadelphia Museum.

Kahn's specialty is landscape — working outdoors and responding to a particular location "where the quality and the scale combine to produce the hint of an image — hedges, roads, fences or the sloping bench with red veins such as abound in 19th century landscape painting," Kahn says.
The Center, located in the UK Fine Arts building on Rose Street, is a new concept and has a new name for what was formerly called the UK Fine Arts Gallery. Jim Tower, artist and instructor in the UK art department, has been named director of the Center.
The Kahn exhibition will continue in the Center for Contemporary Art through March 22. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

With a list of instructors reading like a Who's Who, Morehead State University is preparing to host one of the nation's six Bass Fishing Institutes on April 4 and 5.
Professional fishermen Bill Dance, Tom Mann, Billy Murray, Kim Whitaker, Bobby Murray and Shaw Shabell will provide participants with tips and demonstrations on various techniques of fishing.
Sessions will focus on eight areas of concern to the fishermen including conservation, seasonal patterns, balanced tackle and casting techniques, lure, structure and pattern fishing, depth finders, sounders, locators and traps, rivers and streams, reservoirs, natural lakes, strip pits and farm ponds.
Also to be discussed are lure techniques with instructors demonstrating the speed, depth and action of particular lures in a 3,000-gallon simulator to show how particular lures work over and around different kinds of structures.
There will also be special areas including a youth casting area and manufacturers' display with more than 20 manufacturers of fishing equipment represented.
"Many people have the mistaken feeling that this is just for the club or tournament type fishermen," said Harry Ryan, coordinator of campus events at MSU. "But, the Bass Institute really stresses family involvement which is apparent by last year's combined total of participants which showed that approximately 20 percent were women and 12 percent were youth."
Registration information is available from Harry Ryan, coordinator of campus events, MSU, 901 Gieger Hall, Morehead, Ky. 40351, or by calling 666/783-2276.
