

Kentucky Afield

By John Wilson

A lot of us wake up, perhaps not feeling too well, on New Year's morning and firmly resolve to mend our ways and straighten up our acts. After the usual resolutions not to engage in any more New Year's Eve parties (at least for another year) we get down to the serious side of things.

Among the commitments to be more energetic, forego desserts, stick to the budget, pay more attention to the wife, kids and dog and not buy any more hunting and fishing gear than we absolutely need, we should take a close, hard and objective look at our conduct afield to see if there is room for improvement there.

Chances are there will be. Although the great majority of an outdoorsman aren't full-blown slobs, we do tend to get careless at times. This is something that it's becoming more and more important that we see do.

The hunter (and the fisherman) has been coming under attack in recent years from a small but noisy group of folks who are intent upon outlawing all hunting, fishing or trapping. These anti-hunters are hardcore and there's nothing more we can do to change their mind. But we do need to be concerned about the non-hunting (as opposed to anti-hunting) public — the majority of people who just don't care either way. Let the anti-hunters get the voting majority on their side and we've got real trouble.

Students have said that while many people do not oppose hunting on moral, ethical or environmental grounds, they have a very negative attitude toward the hunter, seeing him as an unsafe, irresponsible slob.

Unfortunately, there are those few there who do handle firearms unsafely, who do trespass over other people's property without asking permission, who do pepper road signs with shot, who do litter — the list could go on and on.

The problem is that these are the hunters who get all the notice. The safe, careful and ethical hunter does nothing to get attention or grab headlines. He leaves no trace of his having been in a particular area and he makes nobody remember or talk about.

So among our New Year's resolutions should be one in which we promise to assure the future of the outdoor sports you enjoy.

Finally, resolve to take a close look at the last 30 of your Kentucky state income tax return. This line allows you to contribute a portion of your tax refund to wildlife. These tax deductible contributions will support non-game wildlife programs and the acquisition of natural areas by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and the Kentucky Nature Preserves Commission.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

It's going to be a bang-up year for all our friends. Best wishes!

Jesse Stuart's first novel republished

It's been 46 years since Kentucky author Jesse Stuart wrote his first novel, "Trees of Heaven." Now it has been republished by University Press of Kentucky.

Stuart began writing the book on his 32nd birthday, August 8, 1939, and finished it 72 days later, delivering it into the waiting hands of E.P. Dutton Co., which published it on April 21, 1940.

"What is written here," said "The New York Times," "wells up as freely as a hill-country spring."

Added the "Saturday Review of Literature," "an exciting book from beginning to end."

"It's still true, in the reissued work, available in cloth at $17.50 or paper at $6.50, at bookstores almost everywhere."

"Trees of Heaven" is notable for its introduction of the Tussey clan, described in a foreword by Wade Hall of Bellarmine College as an "enduring contribution to the literature of the American poor while... a family whose kin ranges from A.B. Longstreet's antebellum Ramay Suttle to William Faulkner's Snopes."

"The director of the University Press of Kentucky, Kenneth Cherry, says, "Our purpose is to see that the greatest Kentucky writers are kept in print," which accounts for the Stuart issue.

BEST WISHES

Let's skate through another year that'll bring many special moments and memories for you and your families. May peace and contentment be your constant companion the entire year long.
